NINETEEN THIRTY LOYOLAN

DEDICATION

The 1950 Loyolan is proudly dedicated to Mr. Stuyvesant Peabody, Chairman of the Loyola University Administrative Council, in recognition of the services he has rendered to the institution.

As the possessor of a war record of which any man might be proud, one of the financial powers of the country, the active director of his own interests, a sportsman of note, and a Catholic by conviction, Mr. Peabody is outstanding among men.

It is the hope of the university officials, as well as the staff of this book, that the sons of Loyola may aspire, in a small measure, to such a position of eminence and distinction as has been secured by Stuyvesant Peabody.

FOREWORD

Any student who has spent his college years under the direction of the Jesuits, and received the benefits of their long years of training and study, will testify to the fact that they are men of foresight and capability, ready to seize any opportunity to further the cause of youth and education.

Back in 1870, Father Damen, Loyola's founder and president, showed the ingenuity and devotion which was to characterize the future directors of the policies of Loyola University. The school was known in those days as St. Ignatius College, and was situated on the outskirts of early Chicago on west Twelfth Street.

A rough and rarely used roadway separated the college building from the parish church. Father Damen went before the council and convinced the city fathers that the street was more of a detriment than an asset, and that it should be closed. When the council decided in his favor, after having made an investigation, he rallied his forces and by midnight had a shift of workmen constructing a fence by torchlight across both ends of the street so that the order of the council would be firmly sealed. It would be unbecoming to mention here the neighborhood riot which ensued the next morning. At any rate the west wing of the college was soon extended over the disputed territory, and from that time the growth of the college was sure and rapid.

The 1930 LOYOLAN is not intended to be an historical account of the institution and the men who made it, but it does attempt to show that Loyola University is finishing its sixtieth year of progress—an asset to the city of Chicago and a realization of the dreams of its vigorous founder, Fr. Damen.

ADMINISTRATION

The
YEAR'S ACHIEVEMENT

Two years ago there was formed at Loyola University a Council of Deans and Regents, the purpose of which was to advise the President in matters academic. One year ago there was formed the Loyola Union, an elective student organization of all departments the purpose of which was to control the student activities by acting as a subsidiary to the President. This year has seen a still greater step in the strengthening and unifying the University. An administrative Council was formed for the purpose of advising the President in matters pertaining to the practical operation of the institution.

The year has seen also the erection of the Elizabeth M. Cudahy Memorial Library, a structure which has satisfied a need which has been existing for many years.

The west section of the Loyola University Stadium was erected during the past summer and an improved field was constructed in time for the 1929 football season. Plans have been fully completed for the finishing of the stadium and the introduction of an intense lighting system by means of which night games may be played during the 1930 season.

These constitute the outstanding achievements of the University since June, 1929. There are others—many others—the importance of which cannot be denied. The school is constantly advancing, its reputation is daily becoming more admirable both in the educational and sport worlds, and its graduates are ever becoming more prominent and successful. Altogether, another long stride has been taken toward the advancement of Catholic education.

The
PRESIDENT'S GREETING

The theme chosen for this year's Loyolan, the place of Loyola in the history of Chicago, is of wide and of deep interest. Loyola is celebrating its sixtieth birthday as a school and its twenty-first as a university: Chicago is making ready to celebrate worthily a century of progress. It is always important to know the relation existing between an educational institution and its site or habitat. Chicago is to me the typical city of the United States—typical of the country in its energy, in its bigness, in its enterprise, in its resourcefulness, in its boastfulness, in the pride it takes in its material accomplishments. There is, however, a hidden quality which is too often overlooked in telling the history of cities, which I believe is the chief element in the greatness of "the world's youngest great city." I refer to the spiritual quality of Chicago, the soul of the city which supplies the vital motives for its towering, visible achievements. While Loyola has contributed much to the material welfare of its home city, as this year book shows so convincingly, still its chief claim for notice and for consideration is its output of men and of women—Christian gentlemen and Christian women of a character which alone give a city true greatness. The Loyolan of 1930 correlates the history of Chicago with that of Loyola University.

The THE ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL

"As the Academic Council (consisting of the Regents and the Deans of Loyola University) advises the President of the University regarding matters educational, so the Administrative Council advises the President in matters of business." The above, taken directly from the constitution of the Administrative Council, expresses in a few words the significance of this newly organized group.

The Council consists of three committees: the Finance, headed by Samuel Insull, Jr., who is assisted by Charles F. Clarke of the Halsey-Stuart Company and Matthew J. Hickey of the Hickey-Doyle Company; the Public Relations, consisting of Martin J. Quigley of the Quigley Publishing Company and Editor of the Chicagoan, Edward J. Mehren of the McGraw-Hill Company, and Peter J. Angsten of the Angsten-Farrell Company, with Mr. Quigley as chairman; and the Grounds and Buildings Committee, consisting of David F. Bremner of the Bremner Bros. Biscuit Company and Edward A. Cudahy of the Cudahy Packing Company. The entire Council is headed by Stuyvesant Peabody, head of the Peabody Coal and numerous other companies.

Taken collectively and individually, the Council is functioning most successfully. The first of the general quarterly meetings was held at the Downtown College on March thirteenth, 1930, and plans were laid which upon completion will prove vital in the development of the University.

THE LOYOLA UNION

In its second year the Loyola Union advanced beyond the achievements of 1929 in better organization, and more definite and detailed execution of the plans outlined by the Union in its beginnings. The Freshman Frolic and Sophomore Cotillion of 1929 were real advances in Social events, and the Junior Prom of 1930 is still a lively memory to all the Students. The Senior Ball is to be the climax.

Senior Booklets are again issued, more attractive and better balanced, the School of Sociology and the Graduate School have joined the Union in full representation, the April elections have replaced the retiring seniors of the Union with capable new directors, the Annual Jamboree was another unqualified success—in short, all the all-university-activities have stepped up to a real university plane, and the hope of Father Kelley, our genial President, of creating something like a real University Spirit in our scattered domains, seems to be more fully realized in 1930 than ever before. We congratulate the Loyola Union members on their work and devotedness.

The following members represent their respective departments:
 Arts: James Brennan, Daniel R. Murphy, John D. White, (Pres.);
 Commerce: Charles LaFond, J. Lawrence Murphy, Frank McTigue;
 Dental: Harold Hillenbrand, Charles Gruner, Paul A. Topel; Law
 (Day): Al Brown, (Vice-Pres.), Emmett Davis, Edward Smith;
 Law (Evening): Joseph Crowe, William Murphy, (Treas.), John O'Connor;
 Medical: Edward Madden, Vic Towle, John H. Whaley;
 Sociology: Virginia Barker, Marie C. Corrigan, Dorothy Kain, (Secretary); Graduate: Frances Moloney.

The
LAKE SHORE CAMPUS

BERTRAM STEGGERT, M.A.,
Registrar

Perhaps one of the most outstanding steps toward unifying the various departments of Loyola University was taken when Mr. Bertram Steggert, of the Lake Shore Campus, was made chief registrar for the College of Arts and Sciences, the Graduate and Commerce Schools, and the Downtown College, with those people formerly in charge of the records of those departments acting as assistants.

Rather than to subordinate the former registrars and secretaries the motive was to bring the records of the school under a unified control by means of which all departments will function together more satisfactorily, especially in the transfer of students from one course to another. The records themselves are, for the most part, still kept in their original offices.

Mr. Steggert has been affiliated with Loyola since September, 1924, long enough to know fully the duties of his office and to establish himself as a part of the institution. Since coming here, he has effected the installation of new record systems and the improvement of those formerly in use; he has established and directed the Loyola University Glee Club prior to its being assigned to Mr. Salvador, the Director of Music; and he reorganized the defunct Sock and Buskin Club, introducing the idea of allowing co-eds to take part in the production of plays, and directed plays previous to the coming of Mr. Costello, the present coach, to Loyola.

Mr. Steggert is a member of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars, the Knights of Columbus, and the Pi Gamma Mu and Phi Mu Chi Fraternities.

The
LOYOLA UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

M. LILLIAN RYAN
Librarian

The work of Loyola University Library has been stimulated this year by the beautiful new library now nearing completion on the Lake Shore Campus. Prospect of adequate facilities promises well for the future. The Elizabeth M. Cudahy Memorial Library will be a striking example of architectural beauty and it will be the aim of those concerned with its administration to make it one of the outstanding Catholic Reference Libraries in this country.

In order that the methods may be in keeping with the best and foremost library procedure the Library of Congress scheme of classification has recently been adopted. This is the plan now followed by many college and university libraries.

The Library welcomed this year the Regional group meeting of the Library Section of the N.C.E.A. which was held on the afternoon of December 29th. At this conference plans were further formulated to publish the Catholic Periodical Index, the first issue of which appeared in March, 1930. This Index is a mighty step forward in the field of Catholic endeavor, and will be a useful tool for the Librarian, and an invaluable help to all research workers. Loyola is proud to have helped in this endeavor.

Following the procedure of other years the book collection has been augmented along special lines, keeping up in as far as possible with general reference books. The best of the new titles and the representative Catholic contributions are purchased. The recommendations of the Catholic Book Club are carefully considered, and bibliographies, both general and specific, are constantly checked with an eye to immediate or future purchase. The Library aims to give adequate and up to date book information.

M. LILLIAN RYAN.

“There were seven men on the faculty, including the president and dean of men during the first year of the college’s existence. Only one man, Mr. J. J. Stevens, S. J., a scholastic, did the actual teaching.”

College Catalog, 1870.

The Student Council rounded out its program by engaging some of the most prominent men in civic affairs, national interest, and religion as lecturers. Among those called upon to address the student body were such notables as Doctor Moorhead, Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Mr. Sheed of the London Educational Guild, Father Keith, nationally famous lecturer on the Mass, James J. Kelly and Vachel Lindsay, famous poet and man of letters.

Another distinct accomplishment accredited to the Student Association was the acknowledgment of the services of Mr. Sachs, Loyola's nationally famous basket ball coach, by the presentation of a player in effigy mounted upon a valuable desk set. Frank Conley was responsible for the work.

Realizing that the promotion of true scholarship was within its province the Student Initiative Committee was reorganized under the leadership of Paul Plunkett. The success of the Student Association may well serve as a mirror of the development and intelligence of the student body.

monwealth, is promised a happy future if the multiple achievements of this year's organization can be called upon to forecast for the future. The Student Association, apart from its more widely heralded duties of ironing out the many entanglements and difficulties which are inherent in the complex character of college life, and the establishment and preservation of amicable relations between students and faculty, has as the reason for its existence the development of a civic consciousness which should serve the students when they assume the duties of citizenship.

A singular achievement of the 1929-30 Student Council was the adoption of the Hare system of preferential voting in all elections. The salient features of this system are: the defeat of factionalism and its attendant evils of quarreling, lust for power, and disharmony; the promotion of groups on the various boards, committees, and offices in proportion to their respective strengths; and the speeding up of all elections.

In early September some sixty aspirants for the coveted sheepskins entered the last lap in the undergraduate race for honors, credits, education, or whatever college students do strive for. Since then the number of white hopes has decreased by only a few—the majority either succeeding in keeping a jump ahead of the professors and the dean or bearing up under the strain of caps and gowns, bachelor's theses, and senior privileges.

In all, the last year climaxed a successful collegiate career for the majority of the graduates. The number engaged in activities was unusually large, their scholastic standings were necessarily high, and only a very small minority had difficulty in persuading the librarians that overdue books on their cards were a credit to the institution.

Soft, soothing, foot loosening music, the girl, shimmering lights, your crowd, nifty favors, Mass, Wags, and home. What a night! The Junior Prom.

After several years of wariness for fear of being caught up by all-hearing profs and subjected to the torments of quizzing in an attempt to see whether you were "punching the bag" or giving facts it is only natural that a junior, when relating the accomplishments of his class, would not be inclined to be verbose or effusive—even when he had indisputable facts to back up his claims.

Suffice it to say in narrating the work of the juniors that they put over a keen dance, lost a number of its members through the rampages of the White Elephant, scholarship, had a number of hot class meetings, and hope to return en masse next year to don the flowing monkey suits and stove plate hats relinquished at Commencement by the Class of 1930.

The collegiate movie opens on the porch of the sorority house. A group of professional dancers goes through a series of contortions on the railings and then . . . the heroine skips out. Naturally, she is awfully sweet and says cute things like, "and how."

It is always the poor sophomore who, in the throes of his new found glory as an upper classman, is the one deluded by the sweet young thing and in the resulting coma proceeds to hand over everything from his fraternity pin to his allowance to the afore-mentioned s. y. t.

So we see that a poor soph has more than the ordinary burden to bear up under. He must "fit the type," as expected by the public, and besides put in his "thirty hours a week, or more, of study outside of class," as required by the dean. With all due fear of offending anyone we are glad to say that very few of the class are normal.

Those of the Class of 1935, in spite of all efforts of themselves, have accomplished several things of importance during their short stay in the university. Following the usual custom they were the largest class yet ushered into the sanctum of the Cudahy Hall; several of its members distinguished themselves as potential greats in the fields of scholarship, athletics, dramatics, music, forensics and social activities (being able to put a dance over, both socially and financially—quite an accomplishment in these troubled times); they fidgeted as much as any of the past sixty odd frosh classes which have remained behind in chapel or assembly while the “seniors passed out first”; and, as usual, possessed the herd psychology characteristic of all underlings not possessing an over great amount of intelligence or self control.

The dean, and several of the more optimistic of the upper classmen, have hopes, however, of seeing them develop into normal human beings who will be able to yell themselves hoarse on Saturday afternoons during the football season, think up creditable and original cuses for their cuts and abstain from dates with high school girls.

The Downtown Sociology School includes students whose interests are of a multiple nature. The greater number are teachers who seek credits toward a degree. Some are undergraduates; some are post-graduates. It is safe to say that a degree of one kind or another is the aim of all; it is fairly safe to add that in the attainment of this degree the time limit is of a very flexible character. Professional advancement in the teaching profession involves certain requirements which allow much individual preference and when these requirements are satisfied the teacher is free to continue her studies at her leisure. Needless to say the continuation character of the school is not conducive to concentrated class action. Students are engaged in professional work which makes extensive demands on time and energy; moreover, outside interest are of a very varied nature. The surprise is that the response to class demands should be so spontaneous and sincere.

A Senior dinner in December and a Senior banquet in June represent the sum total of Senior group activities. And it is unanimously conceded that the smallness of the figure is deplorable, the more so in that the former affair was manifestly a success and the attitude displayed was one of enthusiastic encouragement of similar functions. Circumstances, however, including the omnipresent financial note, and the difficult time problem made further get-togethers a matter more for a mathematical strategist than a social committee.

Despite these few meetings there has been developed within this class an admirable class spirit which centers in the fine class officers through whom the various class activities, few as they were, have been successfully accomplished. This class spirit has also fostered in each and every student a strong bond of friendship for one another which will not end with their days together in studies but will carry on far beyond the sphere of school life and bring them closer together as they tread on through life.

If conditions permit of but little group action on the one hand, they are on the other hand conducive to a very noticeable and admirable individual loyalty. Intermittent contact with Loyola's faculty breeds a realization of its superior pedagogy, and of the soundness, consistency and inspirational Catholicity of underlying principles of thought. The impress of Jesuit teaching is one which a student is indeed loath to lose. The Seniors of 1930 depart with every expression of appreciation and gratitude for the interest manifested in their welfare.

The
SOCIAL SERVICE CLASS

Downtown College

Due to the organizing genius of its founder and the competence of its faculty Loyola School of Sociology, the first Catholic school of social work in this country, is today a prominent institution. In 1915 the Reverend Frederic Siedenburg, S. J., organized the Loyola University Lecture Bureau. In 1914 the Bureau gave place to the School of Sociology which was formally established as a school of Loyola University. It has membership in the Association of Schools of Professional Social Work and in the North Central Association.

The purpose of the School is thus stated: "The School of Sociology is a professional school for education in social work based on Christian principles. It aims to instruct in the fundamental principles upon which procedure and special technique are based. It does not offer short courses nor classes for specialists believing rather that a knowledge of fundamental principles which govern all human relationships, knowledge of the history of social reform, of the laws under which we live, grounds one for the various types of social work. More intensive study in special fields is offered for advanced students, through individualized study programs." While under Catholic auspices, the School admits students of all beliefs.

Social Service work opens a new and fruitful field to students. Without wishing to sound like a maudlin salesman one can truthfully say that its potentialities are almost unlimited. These potentialities are consequent upon a profession still in swaddling clothes. They promise satisfying futures to those who would share in the maturation of a worthy profession. The joys of research, of experiment, of creative work along the socio-medico, socio-politico, socio-religious, socio-educational lines await the student who today enters professional social work.

Social Service Work briefly defined is the business of professionally dispensing with private and community resources for social betterment. In one sense all humanity-helping professions fall under this heading. But as so many of these professions are of established, definite character—medicine, nursing, teaching—they are not included under the conception of Social Service which is limited to the newer methods of effecting social harmony. This most recent step involves organized agencies which attempt to remedy social disorders by scientifically utilizing all educational, recreational, medical, economical, religious facilities. The working principle in this profession is that individuals, families and even communities may be adjusted to more harmonious social relations through assistance of professional workers thoroughly grounded in the ways and means of helping people.

There is certainly no more compensating work than that of helping people and no subject more deserving of study than that of how to help people. Granted that there is a need of danger signals for those students whose first startling contacts with intricate life problems leave them confused, unstable, and of little value to their profession. Yet one may prophesy that the young social worker who has mental poise which acceptance of Christian principles begets will personally profit by broadening experiences and at the same time generously contribute to the development of this serviceable profession.

Rosemary Griffin.

The Lake Shore campus, consisting of twenty-two acres, was purchased on March 9, 1906, for $161,255. At present the land, without the improvements, is valued in excess of two and a half million dollars.

During the past year the Day Law Student Council has succeeded in establishing itself more permanently as a concrete organization at Loyola. It is the fourth year of its existence. The group consists of one elected representative from each of the three classes, the class president of each of the classes, and a president, elected by the entire student body. From this well distributed representation the Council is firmly supported by the entire student body.

WIEDEMANN

The purpose of the council is not to attempt to determine the method in which the school shall be managed and the system which shall be adopted but rather a means by which a student may make a suggestion or declare his rights in a sensible and effective manner. The Student Council represents the students as a body politic and by performing its duties in a fair and conscientious manner since its inauguration has won the support and confidence of the students as well as the faculty.

The Student Council in the Night Law Department serves as a medium through which the entire student body is united in spite of the somewhat loose nature in which it is assembled as a class. The classes meet three nights a week throughout the scholastic season and student council meetings are called as frequently as necessary.

One of the purposes of the Association is to serve as the medium through which the Loyola Union may function in the department. While the latter has direct representatives in the Night Law School, it is still somewhat hampered without the sanction of a strictly Night Law Organization. Hence when the Union endeavors to promote some project the Student Council immediately takes up its share of the work and something is actually accomplished.

Mr. Kelly, the President for two consecutive years, has lent his time and efforts unlimitedly throughout his terms.

The Seniors of the year of 1929-30, of the Day Law School, have enjoyed a most refulgent year under the able guidance of President of the Student Council, Joseph Wiedmann, President of the Senior Class, Daniel O'Rourke, Vice-President, Virgil McGowan, Secretary Helen Newman, Treasurer, Eleanor Waters.

As is characteristic of them, the Seniors were always well represented in every line of endeavor, social or athletic, of the University.

To Football they contributed Griffin and Walsh; to Intramural Basketball, a most enviable quintet; to the Law Debating Society, Wiedmann, Hart, Brown, Solomon, and McGowan; and to the Loyola News, Waters and Santucci.

The annual Stag given by the Seniors for a "get acquainted, Freshman!" purpose, was so successful that the Freshmen now notoriously cut in on the conversations of the Seniors and Juniors without their former blush of brazenness or embarrassment.

To end their days in college in glamorous resplendence, the Seniors have been

With aught but tender regard and esteem for each and every professor of the Law School, and an affectionate warmth of loyalty for Dear Loyola, the Seniors leave its old walls of learning for the more ancient and obstinate walls of experience of that other school universally known as the World, fully equipped to combat its avariciousness, and glory in its munificence.

Editor's Note: It seems a shame that with such a good subject to talk about and such a capable person as Miss Newman, one of the two pretty gifts of nature in the above picture, doing the talking that more wasn't said. In the first place, every little statement she made was as true as they make 'em. The Senior Day Law Class is honestly a credit to the institution. Just because there is a copper in the picture there is no reason to believe that he is there to maintain order. He's an ordinary student but he's awfully Irish so he had to be a copper part of the time. Another reason for which we would like to have had Miss Newman write more is this—we had to fill out the rest of the page.

Under the active leadership of Cornelius J. Collins, the Junior Day Law Class completed a very successful year. The responsibility and burdens of the officers were placed upon the shoulders of men who earnestly worked for the benefit of the class. Alfred "Packey" Cassidy, represented our constitutional rights in the Student Council while Ed Smith served in the same capacity, but his duties were attached with the Loyola Union. Bill Lowrey was Corny's understudy and capably fulfilled the office of vice-president.

We can only recall one incident when Lowrey and Cassidy failed to appear, and that was the time when they became "snow bound" in Joliet, during the great blizzard.

Dan Buckley brightened things up with his colorful character, beside carrying out his duties as Secretary. There he proved to be a big help to Pete Fazio, who had many difficulties in handling the financial resources which had been accumulated by the class.

The class was represented on the football field by Captain Collins, who carried the team through a successful season and Bob Burke, one of the best half-backs ever produced on the Loyola gridiron.

The right wing of the Grand March of the Junior Prom was led by President Cornelius Collins. The class coöperated with the Union officials to the utmost in this as well as the other endeavors sponsored by that organization. The Jamboree, Senior Ball, the class dances, and events sponsored by the various organizations of the school, and especially those of the Downtown College, were supported to a great extent by members of the Junior Day Law Class.

The vitality which characterized the class was evident at all times. Not alone in extra curricular activities, and extra scholastic ones but during class sessions was it noticeable. Being determined in pursuing the profession they made the most of their opportunities for unlike students who attend college with only the vaguest of ideas as to their future occupation, Law students, on the whole, are seriously intent upon learning the "trade."

Generally, the scholastic standing of the class was high and the students caused little or no trouble to the professors. In conclusion, the year passed very quickly and will be one which each member of the class will remember throughout his law career.

Behold the great freshmen! And the funny part of it is, we really are great. There's our size, for one thing. The class of 1933 is one of the largest freshman classes which ever infested these more or less spacious halls of learning.

But it isn't quantity alone by which we prove our case. When you went to see Loyola win her football games last season, did you realize that five men from the Freshman Law class were on the team? There's Ray Nolan, who also shines as a heart-breaker, you know, Frank Murphy, John Unavitch, and the famous twins: Frank Lutsenkirchen and Chris Poppelreiter. Pop by the way, is also famous as being the strong man who played in every one of the games this past season.

As to our loyalty—that elusive school spirit—you have only to remember the way we supported the great work of the Stadium Committee, and how we've turned out to attend the games and the meetings of various sorts. Sixty per cent of the class, too, are engaged in school activities. The Sock and Buskin Club knows our talent; the News bears the impressions of our geni. Well, the editors think it's that, at any rate! And speaking of the News—we even help run it! Dan Murphy, freshman, is Sports Editor, and Larry Crowley is Managing Editor of the Downtown Campus. These same two, Dan and Larry, together with Sidney DeLove, another freshman, get the credit for organizing the Debate Club of the Law School—of which Mr. DeLove is president and Larry Crowley business manager. These three again—we'll be calling them the musketeers next)—arranged with Station W C R W for the weekly College hour when Loyola takes the air.

The officers we have chosen are well fitted to guide such a brilliant company. Neal McAuliffe, who took his pre-legal on the North Side, is our president. Our vice-president, James Courtney Ryan, manages the business of the football team. The secretary Jean Connell, one of the four girls in the class, took her pre-legal at the College of Saint Teresa, in Winona, Minnesota. Chris Poppelreiter is treasurer—we need say nothing more about him! Matthew Lear nobly represents us in the Student Council.

Of our future we can say nothing more than—Judge what it will be by this glance at our past.

The business of preparing a background of legal knowledge of sufficient depth to merit a sheepskin at the June Commencement kept the class keyed to a high pitch of scholastic effort. This was reflected in the favorable record of achievement set by the group, serving to advance the standards of the school a few more points in its march to a position of preeminence. The class average was outstanding. Over and above the work in the classroom, the members have been ardent supporters of the Loyola Union in all of the all-university functions that it has sponsored. This evidence of a genuine Loyola spirit was made in the face of the usual difficulties that beset those enrolled in a night school. Alive to the necessity of an active cooperation with all the departments of the university if the ideal of a united Loyola was to be realized the seniors lent themselves heartily to any constructive program in which they were asked to participate. This, in spite of the generally recognized fact that night school is hardly the place to look for the apogee of the social whirl commonly supposed to be a necessary concomitant to college life.

The roster of graduates is smaller than that of last year, numbering but thirteen which may be taken as a substantiation of the popular superstition attaching to that much maligned integer. However, there is some pronouncement to the effect that quality is preferable to quantity, which rather slight vindication is amply sufficient for the needs of the present senior law class.

Mr. Joseph Byrnes was chosen president at the annual class elections in September. In his freshman year Mr. Byrnes discharged the duties of class scribe, recording in the 1927 Loyolan the Class's activities during the preceding year, a function that all the present members of the class seemed extremely hesitant in fulfilling. Mr. John J. Kelly was president of the freshman class. He is now ready to reap the rewards of four years' study at Loyola. Mr. Howard F. Schlacks was president of the class in his sophomore year and Mr. Joseph Byrnes was vice-president. Miss Edna Devlin held the position of secretary-treasurer, a position which she has continued to fill in the succeeding years. Mr. Arthur Burke was elected president of the class last year, the junior year. Mr. James R. O'Leary was vice-president, and Miss Devlin retained the office of secretary-treasurer. The seniors this year elected Mr. Byrnes president, Mr. Gerald Haley vice-president, Miss Devlin secretary-treasurer, and Mr. E. Daley student representative.

The supreme manner in which the president of the Night Law Class of 1931 led the way for his classmates was so admirable that we can't resist the temptation to give him a little send-off in this section of THE LOYOLAN. You know, presidents of classes in the Night Law School don't have much opportunity to rake in graft because there isn't anything in the way of funds, all members of the class being broke like the rest of us. Now by saying that he doesn't have any opportunity to rake in graft we are not trying to imply that other presidents of other classes actually do such low things but we do say that they have the opportunity.

The vice-president of the class, Miss Susan Blake, was superb likewise in performing her duties. The duties of the vice-president of an Evening Law Class are about as heavy as those of the vice-president of the United States, except that the vice-president of the United States has to serve as an object of talk on the part of William Rogers and such. Miss Blake would have been very wonderful as a class president but it seems that Mr. O'Connor didn't kick off. There was some talk for a while that she was plotting against him and had eyes on the presidency but that was just talk.

Jack Maher is the secretary whose duties, among others, is to write these little items which appear in the Yearbook. Now if we were to go ahead and sign Jack's name to this article it might not be the best thing in the world for Jack so we won't do it. Anyway we don't know Jack and he might be bigger'n us.

Mr. Curry is the secretary of the class. He has been held down during the entire year by the worries of the financial administration of the class which has annual dues of ten cents which nobody but the most foolish pay. There being nobody in the class who is foolish, the results can with a little amount of reasoning be readily grasped.

Why we should waste all this space, all this ink, all this time, all your time—not to mention the wear and tear on the type—on the class officers is strange. Perhaps the other members of the class are the really great ones. Perhaps they offered these offices to everyone in the class before they finally got these particular people to accept them. That may be wrong too. It's just an idea. Anyway, there is Ed Maguire. He made Lindbergh look like a back number when he came forth in some of the Sock and Buskin Club plays. Mr. Hartnett is a great man too. We haven't heard of anything he has done but he looks like a big strong he-man. (See the opposite page.) We sort of think that Mr. Hooper would like to be president of the class. He hopped into the center seat in the picture. That's all right though. Maybe he wants to be president next year and is just practicing up. The picture on the opposite page isn't the entire group. You see it was snapped just after one of the classes was dismissed and most of the members couldn't wait to crash into print. Isn't that too bad. My, My, My, think what we would be missing if we were Doris Blakes trying to find a good character. Such a small group to choose from. But, Oh, what quality there is in this little group!

Legal education in Chicago, where crooked politicians and racketeers seem to play such an important part in the dispensation of justice, is like the double edged sword. That, perhaps, is why the general public is so anxious for the Loyola Evening Law Class of 1932 to get into practice and right the many wrongs to which the city has been subjected.

The officers in this particular class are men who have shown themselves entirely fit for their positions. Several of them came from the Lake Shore Campus just a couple of years ago and brought with them some of that spirit with which that campus is exploding.

Jim O'Connor, the class president, was, once upon a time, editor of THE LOYOLAN. That same year he was President of the Loyola Debating Club. He was recently elected to the Presidency of the Blue Key Honor Society, which office he will assume during the ensuing year. Maybe we shouldn't have mentioned anything about THE LOYOLAN. Jim's book was far more sensible than this one, though, so that explains matters.

The Vice-president, Miss Fox, was an invaluable aid to Mr. O'Connor throughout the year, helping as she did, to overcome the many problems of the class. Wonder what they were?

Mr. O'Leary served as Secretary and Treasurer during the year and fulfilled his duties quite admirably with the exception of an error in his balance sheet at the end of the year. The loss which ran well into ten figures, was charged to depreciation and forgotten. The Class of 1932 decided unanimously to put Mr. O'Leary into politics and run him for County Treasurer. He would be most efficient he assures us.

Mr. Waldron came from the Lake Shore Campus where he was President of the Student Association during his senior year. Jack is the Sophomore Night Law representative to the Night Law Student Council this year and he ought to know how to handle it pretty well.

This Class actually stands out. Look at the men in the picture across the page! Joe Grady, a man who knows what he thinks and says it! Ambrose Kelly, former Editor of the Loyola News and first creator of good journalism in a big way at Loyola! Tom Byrne, former Editor of THE LOYOLAN and a stickler when it comes to getting things done! John Powers, ripsnorting he-man from Oak Park, former big shot on the Loyola News and general good fellow! But we can't go on naming all of 'em. They're all great fellows.

Did you ever see a more attractive group of individuals than you see on the opposite page? Now that has a low-down implication. We didn't mean to say that the ones on this page were not attractive. They are handsome chaps, too. But anyway, these fellows are not going to Loyola's School of Law just because they are John Barrymores. They seek legal education.

One of the most outstanding men in this renowned group of serious minded youngsters is Jim Hammond. He has made a name for himself around Loyola ever since he came forth with a heart rending recital of "The Face on the Bar-room Floor" several years ago. First he acts as though he is a drunkard, then he becomes a bartender, then pretty soon he is a dead man. But then everybody again realizes that it is only Jim Hammond displaying his mental wares. It has been said that James Hammond makes the best drunkard of all the men ever to have gone on the stage. Off the stage, Jim does not indulge ever. That's true! Just ask Jim.

The serious minded looking chap at the top of this page is without doubt the most successful, the most popular, the most admired man who has ever attained to the presidency of the Freshman Class of 1933. He has led the class with enthusiastic vigor throughout the year with such punctiliousness that it is sometimes believed that he seeks the office for next year. Well, doesn't he deserve it? He's the best one they had this year. Of course he has been aided to no small degree by the ever helping Costello and Burke, his understudies. Maybe we should call them henchmen—or bodyguards—or gunmen. It is reported that they perpetrated the Valentine's Day affair and also the Easter Sunday pop-gun party. It is well known that they always favored holidays and this is one of the reasons which caused the cops to lay the blame of the above-mentioned holiday affairs onto them.

Many of the men in this class are old-timers at Loyola having done preparatory work in the Pre-legal department, a subsidiary of the Commerce Department, believe it or not. That's just one of the little things which you and others do not understand but what difference does it make. It's true, just the same. Ask Ripley. And it couldn't be wrong—its in print right here.

It might be good to explain here how these classes are arranged. The Night Law Department requires four years work to receive degrees and, as pre-requisite work, demands a certain amount of college credits or the equivalent which can be taken in the pre-legal department of which there are three years. The men who attend the pre-legal department frequently change to commerce and men originally intending to get a degree in commerce change to the legal department. The two are closely related in some respects and the change can frequently be made in the early stages with very little difficulty. At all events, the boys get some education which is really quite valuable in the business world.

Don't these fellows look as if they could cut a mean slice? They're all doctors of the first degree now and whether or not they saw straight makes little difference, just so the patient doesn't find out—and the patient usually doesn't. The coroner does.

Just the other day someone was saying something about having an appendectomy performed and if these gentlemen who have just foxed the University out of a series of M.D.'s know how to do that, they deserve one of the hard earned sheepskins. The rest of us ordinary individuals can't even pronounce the thing without hesitating. Maybe that's why they have such things as Arts colleges—to provide a place to learn how to pronounce what the docs do. Just a thought, though. Just a thought.

Getting down to brass tacks, these men who manage to get degrees from the Loyola University School of Medicine have won the respect of the entire student body. The Medical School is generally regarded as offering the most complete, the most thorough, and the hardest course in the Uni-

Out of an original one hundred and forty members, one hundred and twenty remain to tell of the difficulties to be overcome by a medical student during the first three years. Ronald Lindsay, as president of the class is a capable leader and together with the cooperation of the administration has instilled a spirit of loyalty to Loyola into the members of the Junior Class.

The class consists of representatives from India, South America, The Philippines, and practically every state in the Union. That the study of medicine is not limited to men is evidenced by the fact that there are four women in the class.

This spring the class as a whole was earnestly engaged in preparation for the state and county examinations. It is the avowed purpose of every member to put forth his best effort that the Loyola Medical School may retain its high standing as an institution of learning.

In Autumn 1928 one hundred and thirty aspiring sawbones entered the halls of the Loyola Medical School hopeful of emulating the ideal physician as portrayed in the Oath of Hippocrates. Quarterly and semester exams took their toll and still others feeling that medicine was not the profession which their youthful dreams had led them to believe adapted themselves accordingly.

The class, as freshmen, staged a cooperative dance with the Sophomore Class and the result was one of the most successful affairs in recent years at the medical school.

With the beginning of the second year the class returned almost intact. Camilio Volini, an amiable leader, took over the duties of former president Larry Crowley who, believing that one should see Loyola first, had changed to the Law School.

Classes are becoming more and more difficult. The junior year will be devoted in a large part to work in the clinic. The whole process is one which steadily rounds the future M. D. into an automaton who can carry on without sleep; consume the wares of the all-night lunch counter with impunity; and assimilate lawsuits and knocks with composure.

A medical student's time is of great value to him, every minute being required for his studies. His recreations and social activities are few and far apart. Still these obstacles did not faze the high-spirited men in the freshman class. There may be found in the group a surprising number of athletes who participate heavily in the sporting side of Loyola life not to mention those who take an active interest in the other extra-curricular undertakings. The success of the Loyola All-University Freshman Dance was made a success in no small way by the efforts of this Class of 1933.

With an enrollment of one hundred and fifty the Freshman class began its career as the largest ever to enter Loyola's Medical School. Its members have congregated from all parts of the United States and various foreign countries ready to put their "noses to the grindstone." They have quickly grasped the idea that their "Rah Rah" high school days are over and that to get results they must pay the price.

As the Pre-Legal department is merely a subsidiary of the Commerce it likewise has representatives in the Council. Glasser, as a matter of fact, is a second year Pre-Legal student himself. The fact that the group represents so many classes accounts for the large number of members. Class presidents are automatically included in the list as well as the individual class representatives who are elected directly. Thus, the association is truly representative of the students.

A glance over the picture above will indicate several men who have gained eminence in all-university activity. The Commerce Department has in the past contributed much toward the development of spirit, not only by furnishing leaders but by furnishing general and popular support to a man. If other departments would take as active an interest as these men do, if other student councils would get the results that this one does, if other individuals would have half the enthusiasm as these, Loyola would be sitting pretty in every respect.

Three years ago there was formed in the Commerce Department of the University a group of ambitious students called the Commerce Club. It was the only attempt ever made in the Commerce School to establish any sort of organization and at first there was much fear as to its success. But it weathered the rough knocks that it received shortly after the first few months of its existence, when interest was lagging and the first glitter of experiment was gone, and it still exists today—but under another name.

MCGURN

Last year it changed to what is called the Commerce Student Council and in so doing became a part of the all-university organization. At that time the original entrance requirements were slightly changed but the purpose is practically the same—the promotion of better understanding between faculty and students, the righting of any wrongs that may occur in the progress of scholastic activity, and the advancement of the social relations between students of the department.

Various attempts have been made, with a great amount of success, to foster social gatherings in the Downtown College for the benefit of these students and, that the entire university may take part, everyone is invited. These usually consist of a smoker supplemented by entertainment of some various kinds and followed by a dance.

The Student Council sponsors, also, the Commerce Student Faculty Banquet, one of the most successful social affairs held in the University. The one held during the present year is mentioned on page two hundred and seventy-five of this book.

Much of the work this year was done chiefly through the efforts of the president of the group, Edward Glasser. Ed is at the present time completing the second year of his work at Loyola but in his short time here has gained a thorough knowledge of the conditions that exist not only in the Commerce Department and the Downtown College but in the entire University as well.

The Commerce Student Council has, during its few years of existence rendered more than one invaluable service to the University. It has tried to guide the activities of the Commerce department in such a way as to promote its general welfare. And no one will deny that it has been visited with success on every venture.

Students from the Commerce Department prepare themselves for the business world with unexpected diligence. Most of them are employed during the day and have adopted this method of training themselves for bigger and better things. No doubt they'll get 'em.

The Commerce school was in the early stages of its existence at 28 North Franklin when these groups started as freshmen. To them the Department owes much credit for the instilling of school spirit into the newly formed department. For the last few years the various functions of the University, from athletics to dramatics, has been supported most conspicuously by Commerce students and this attitude of good will seems to extend to every member of the classes. We only hope that it continues.

JOHN I. LARDNER,

The graduating class has been fortunate in securing the leadership of Hubert Neary, a man outstanding among those few who are able to put life into a group of men in such a way that something really worth while can be accomplished.

If a man has three stenographers, two messenger boys, a box of stale cigars, and a Jew's harp with a rough edge, how long will it take to build a building twelve stories high, about as narrow as the one just north of the Wrigley tower, and containing plate glass windows on all the upper floors and isinglass on the lower two, and with a cigar store Indian out in front?

The precise subject matter covered by the members of the Class of 1932 in the Commerce Department is not definitely known but we feel that we can state here with a reasonable amount of certainty that they are not required to memorize answers to questions of the above type. Of course, we don't want to be quoted as saying this but it has been rumored that one day in one of the classrooms one of the students asked one of the other students something of that nature and it was necessary to turn on the fire hose to quell the disturbance. That seems sort of juvenile though, so it probably never happened.

Other things do happen down there though. For instance, the school being located as it is just a step or two from the loop and not much further from the Chicago River is ideally situated to provide the students with what are nearly as good as box seats for all the Communist meetings, downtown fires, and river drownings. The fact that the classes meet in the evening is an added attraction. There is always the possibility of a robbery turning up at the most unexpected moment and everyone knows that the most daring, the most sensational, the most interesting of all Chicago excitement takes place after the curfew bell rings.

That brings on another matter. Is there a curfew bell in Chicago? And if there is where is it and when does it ring? Also, who rings it and do we all have to go to bed when it rings? These are only a few of the questions which are not answered in the 1952 Commerce Class of Loyola. There are thousands of others.

The rumor that has been circulated rather promiscuously around the department since this book has appeared implying that several of the second year commerce men are blind is totally incorrect. The impression was gotten from the above picture which was taken the morning after one of those "previous nights." The boys are merely a little fatigued and quickly grasped this opportunity to catch up on sleep. The professors in the Commerce Department aren't the least considerate. They wouldn't think of allowing members of their class to take a little nap now and then while volumes upon volumes of deep thought are being made available. But anyway, this will serve to knock that vile rumor on the head.

A complete scoop on the play given by the members of the Class of 1933 in the Department of Commerce was secured by an ever alert (like on Rockne's teams) staff member of The 1930 LOYOLAN. Inasmuch as it was impossible to secure the title of the play, or the names of the members of the class who took part in it, or what it was about, or where it was presented, or how much it cost to get it, or whether it was any good, it is practically impossible to say very much about it. But of course the writing of this book is merely one type of journalism and journalism doesn't need to be true because people will believe anything that gets into print anyway. There is one which is certain. The play wasn't any good and the entire audience would have walked out except that there wasn't any audience to speak of. But why should we go into detail on the matter? The play will not be presented again and the general public will not be interested in a review of a play that they will not get to see.

The Freshman Class, as this one is more commonly known, is made up for the most part of men

Top Row: A. SMITH, F. SHEVLIN, WM. LANNON, R. SUCH, S. R. RILEY, A. COOK, S. PANTOLA, J. MCGROGAN, D. KAVANAUGH, E. STRUMIL, T. BROWN, J. FITZSIMMONS, J. J. SMITH. Second Row: S. SWEENEY, S. who are employed during the day and seek knowledge after the curfew bell. But the question again arises: is there a curfew bell? Then there are the accompanying matters of doubt which arise.

But we must get back to that play. The members of the class being employed during the day at an average salary of two hundred and twelve dollars and fifty-four cents per week could well afford to make it a thing of beauty and a joy forever. However, it seems that the recent (and hackneyed) stock market crash had entirely too much effect on the avoidduois of their benign purses, all of which led to results that you can guess as well as we. Lennon, the most gracious and esteemed master of the exchequer, intended to pull a fast one on the rest of the "clath" as he would call them if he lisped, which he doesn't, by gently skipping out for Mexico as soon as some of the money came rolling in but inasmuch as the money not only did not come in but was necessarily drawn out to cover the terrible overhead on the play thereby causing little red ink marks on the wrong side of the ledger in the bank, little Willie had to go to Bridewell to see a man about a big contract.

No human being has an imagination terrible enough to think up all the above things, you say? No, that's what we say too. It was a dream that Bob Walsh had one day last week. No. He didn't write this. He had one of the stenographers in one of his offices in one of his branch factories do it. Now wait. Maybe we're thinking of another fellow. Perhaps this is about some other class. Well, what of it?

The first business of the class during the scholastic year, 1929-1930, was, in genuine legal regard for precedents, the election of the class officers for the ensuing year. If there is never another meeting you can at least be certain that a convocation will be called to determine upon whose shoulders will devolve the task of leading the class members out of the welter of routine obligations, social as well as academic, unto the promised time of June, for some a continuation, for others an ending of their education, but for the Third Year Pre-legal it is in a strict sense a commencement, since with the approach of June they leave behind the anticipatory studies of pre-law and enter into the specialized fields of their choice.

The results of the election were a surprise to no one, the men chosen constituting the most able group in so far as executive ability stamps a man as superior. All that was required of the class members was an official cognizance of the merit of the men and the stamp of class approval in the form of ballots proclaiming the desirability of these men to function in the capacity of class officers. The results favored Mr. Thomas Nash for president of the class. Mr. Francis J. McTighe was elected vice-president, with Mr. Robert McGurn secretary, and Mr. Daniel Nash treasurer. Although the duties of class officers at no time tend to become unduly exacting, nevertheless the recognition of the officers-elect as potential leaders of the class is a mark of signal honor requiring for its efficacy no real destination unto which they might lead the body to demonstrate the actual possession of the powers imputed to them.

Our genial president, 'Tommy' Nash, has devoted himself to the duties of his office in a highly praiseworthy manner discharging them with expedition and precision. 'Introspective' McTighe stood ever ready to carry on in the absence of Nash, but such an ardent student is our 'Tommy' that McTighe was given but little opportunity to assume the reins of class government; however he was an able second of the president in all matters of school improvement.

If you should now suddenly turn to page three hundred and sixty and glance over the names on the Blue Key list, lovely reader, you will find inserted the names of more than one man from this class. There you have proof more solid than words can tell of the actual significance of the work done during the year by members of this third year Pre-Legal class. Blue Key has a large and worthy representation from the Pre-Legal Department.

Brutus was taking a walk one day out on the streets of Rome when his old friend Julius Caesar came along. "Let's go into the temple and shoot some pool," suggested Brutus. "OK, Chief?" "OK, Chief," replied Caesar. And they stepped inside.

After they had been playing for a short time and it was Caesar's turn to shoot, something occurred. Julius was leaning over the table getting ready to do a fancy backhand slice when Brutus dashed over to him, yanked out his dagger, and stabbed the great Caesar, saying "Sic semper tyranny." Caesar was deeply hurt and turning, looked up from the stairs upon which he was rolling down and cried "Et tu Brute" and Brutus replied "Et tu."

And thus came the end to one of the world's greatest rulers.

Daniel Howe is another of the world's great rulers. He has ruled the second year prelegal students with an iron will for the past year, firm in his convictions at all times, consistent in his commands, tired of his job, and bored with life in general, but forever inspiring to those who look to him as their model in virtue.

Ed Glasser crashed into office again here by means of his well organized political crew in the department but more so by his ability for leadership and accomplishment. He is president of the Commerce Student Council, a fact which you, dear reader, have already discovered unless it so happened that those pages where it is represented were accidentally stuck together when the pastepot upset or unless the reader previous to you didn't like Commerce Student Councils and yanked those pages from this trite little publication.

Kiley and Kerwin wanted to throw a dance this year but it seems that the latter sprained his arm playing baseball with the Tribune's Training School for Kiddies. Inasmuch as Kiley was so anxious to throw the dance and had made so many plans for a big one it was suggested that Al Lasdon come to his assistance.

Well, Al said that he had been brought up pretty well and that he was never allowed to throw things around so he didn't think that he would be the man for the job. So Kiley and his happy idea sort of took a back seat. But Kiley isn't the man to be stopped, once he makes up his mind to do a thing. As soon as it was made certain to him that there was no one in the entire class strong enough to throw a dance Kiley marched right over to the Sports Department of the Chicago Daily News and asks for Big Moose. It seems that Big Moose was out picking raspberries that afternoon so Howie said he could take care of the matter for Kiley. By this time Kiley was so disgusted with people in general, weak or strong, that he gritted his teeth, tore out to a dance hall, grabbed a couple of dances, swung them around his head and out the window they did go. Up until April, 1930 Bill Coughlin acted as President of the first year Prelegal class but at that time was succeeded by the Vice-president, Ed Barrett, as Bill accepted a position substituting for Tom Mix in the Sells Floto Circus. Bill cannot ride a horse so he gets shot out of a cannon instead. A lot of the people are so busy watching the monkeys and feeding peanuts to the elephants that they don't know the difference anyway. His salary wasn't much so he took it out in pink lemonade. That was his first grave mistake, though, because three women (riders of white horses) brought him to court on the charges of non-support, recklessness with money, and general cruelty. His second grave mistake occurred when he tried to take the judge's mind off the subject by telling a joke. His Honor had heard the joke when a boy.

Bill's going to make good, though. You can just see success written all over his face and its the first impression that always counts. He's just as good as retired now. In a few years he'll probably buy a new building or football team for Loyola.

People will point to him and say, "There's Bill Coughlin," just as if it were Lindbergh or someone equally as great. Pst. Bill, how about a fin 'til t'morrer?

Hugh Savage learned his politics from his kid brother who once was President of the Freshman Class on the Lake Shore Campus. Gene was a gun when it came to getting votes. He seemed to find them around behind trees—just like mushrooms, in waste baskets, and—well, he actually seemed to make votes. Hugh is a different type of person, though. He has a gang working for him. Anybody that won't vote his way goes for a ride.

This little group of yearlings did quite a bit for the University this year. Some of them flunked out. Others paid their tuition. It has not been the intention of the class to accomplish great things as a class but rather as individuals. A chain is as strong as its weakest link, according to them, so every man has to do something for himself—except in times of examination, of course. Then everybody helps everybody else.

“Applicants for admission to the college must be ten years of age, must know how to read, write, and spell creditably, and should be able to do long division . . . It is recommended that pupils finish the sixth grade . . . before applying for admission into college.”

'All right, hop into the chair,' said one of the boys. And not without some misgivings I sat down and allowed my fellow students to place the nozzle over my face.

For several moments there was nothing but a steady hum-m-m-m, that seemed to throb through my brain; everything seemed hazy; then suddenly there was a crash and with a start I opened my eyes on an amazing scene. About me were grouped my classmates and gradually it dawned on me that they were holding a meeting.

The gentlemen gazing out at you, dear reader, from the opposite page are about to go out into the world seeking teeth to pull, fill, X-ray, and whatever else there is to be done to teeth. In another year they will be supervising admiringly the erection of a professional looking sign bearing their name. They will be wondering if and when somebody is going to come yelping for relief and if and when they will be able to administer relief to the yelping patient successfully.

The Junior class, among other things, edits the Dentos, a yearbook devoted entirely to the Dental School. The initiative shown by the classes each year as they prepare the book is really admirable in as much as time for such activities as yearbooks is scarce. Uneasy lies the tooth that wears a crown. Sophomores, completing the second year of their dental studies, are becoming more and more aware of the veracity of this statement. Not that they have progressed to such an extent in their studies that they are able to crown teeth of the all-suffering patrons of the clinic—they leave that to their more advanced juniors and seniors—but the difficulties experienced in less intricate tasks by some members of the class do not bode well for the crowned heads.

The class under the able direction of Drs. Puterbaugh and Pike is learning their class song, Tool! Tool! Toothie, Goodbye! in the best possible manner. As yet only the first few verses, and the least difficult, have been set to memory but progress toward the goal of knowing all about dental surgery is being made.

The Freshman class was led a merry chase this year by Wallace Kirby, CLASS PRESIDENT. "Bill" as they call him sometimes up on the North Campus was a crack half-miler on the TRACK team as well as tooth-puller deluxe from the Dental Department. Evidently he fears that some day he will extract a tooth without removing the pain and will need his athletic ability to gain safety. Then again it may be that he merely likes track.

Some of the men in this class have gone through one year of pre-dental training and others transferred with the necessary pre-requisites. However, they are now well started on the road to dental fame, maybe. They claim that a decayed root is the source of all evil and who doubts it—when he has a decayed root? There are various other sources of evil, of course, which these men will not be able to remove but every man can do his part and they are doing theirs.

When something is hard to do, people say "it's like pulling teeth trying to get it done." Well, pulling teeth isn't so hard to do. The very first day the class president pulled a whole set—out of

"But Daniel was not to be outdone when the cruel king threw him into the deep dark pit of lions. Daniel was a man of resourcefulness! He had believed in being prepared! Daniel was a dentist and he pulled the lions' teeth.

"That, dear little pre dental students, is the story of Daniel and the lions den as it should have been," concluded the professor as he closed his book and smiled a pleasing smirk.

These hard-hearted looking individuals don't look like they would believe a story such as this, do they? Perhaps they don't.

We'll wager one thing though. These fellows aren't going to go out behind their cabinets after they become dentists and cry their eyes out every time a poor, poor patient comes groaning with a tooth. Wait, wait, dear reader. When we say poor patient we are expressing sympathy for the patient, not characterizing his financial condition. Yes, if the latter were true, no doubt the dentist would do the crying, and loudly.

THE CHICAGO COLLEGE OF DENTAL SURGERY

Now that we have waded through the chaff, here are the actual facts pertaining to the Chicago College of Dental Surgery.

The school came into existence forty-eight years ago during which period it gained a considerable reputation in its field. The institution has been most fortunate in attracting a type of student whose subsequent career has reacted to the greater renown of the school. Of over five thousand graduates, many have achieved great distinction and are recognized as authorities in dental education and practice. In 1924 the school became a part of Loyola University.

The Dental School, while a strictly collegiate atmosphere prevails, is a center of professional ambitions. Students of this department have selected their goal and work toward it with unflinching and determined interest. The standing which it has reached in the realm of dental education has made it an intellectual center for those of the profession.

On October 8, 1871, the Chicago fire broke out a few blocks east of the college. A sudden veering of the wind saved the building just as destruction seemed imminent. Immediately after the fire the Bishop established his headquarters in the college building for a period of six months, after which he presented a thousand dollars to the college Museum of Science and Natural History.

NURSING

The
MERCY HOSPITAL

School for Nurses

It is a generally accepted principle that most of the credit for greatness in an individual belongs to the mother. During the loving association and companionship with that God-given guardian, the child imbibes the parent's excellent characteristics—alertness of intellectual perception and the pure and elevated qualities of her nature.

It may never be recognized nor appreciated how much of our progress in learning and of our acquisition of the sense of real responsibility we owe both directly and indirectly to the influence of the Sisters of Mercy upon us at Mercy Hospital. In all our struggles, temptations, and vicissitudes of the past three years of training the Sisters ever maintained not only a clear and alert understanding toward us but also a steadfast and loyal sincerity in the conscientious discharge of their duty.

On graduation day many trails through the immensity of life's future will loom up before us. Then, in answer to the call of service to humanity, we will hear the voice of duty bid us sever the ties of close friendships formed during our intimate relationship with associates and instructors. Each and every individual member of the Class of 1930 will come forward ready for duty bearing within the sanctuary of her own being an invisible equipment of fundamental qualities and principles necessary to reach the ideals of success inspired by the Sisters of Mercy.

Within this class, one finds a mass of marvelous material, a field worthy of any sculptor's efforts to mould into figures of immortal beauty. Truly, a class has arrived that will fulfill every hope that has been cherished, that will realize the highest ideals presented by their teachers and that will give to the world that something that money cannot buy—the voluntary giving of self to a noble ideal, living a life of principle, and devoting that life to all that is beautiful and worth while. That life—a nurse's life—is an inspiration to all who behold it.

Such is the class of today that is prepared by their years of study to ease suffering, to lighten life's burdens and to fold within their own kindly influence all those who are fortunate enough to come in contact with them. A class that we feel will make an indelible impression on life and will be an inspiration to all who follow in the footsteps of the Great Healer.

Whatever attainments may be achieved by the class of '31, it is evident that class spirit, ambition, and enthusiasm run high. Every heart in this exceptional class is filled with animation, every mind is kindled with ideals and aspirations, and every face is aglow with expectancy as each new sun brings another day of interest to the aspiring nurse.

As we tread this path of our predecessors and cope with the problems they encountered we hope we may display the same patience and perseverance and gain the success that is theirs.

Among our interests are the devotional activity of our Sodality, which is dedicated to "The Blessed Virgin Mary," our class studies, and our limited social functions, foremost of these being the Junior-Senior Prom; and our Christmas party.

During the month of September, nineteen twenty-nine we forty-seven came from parts far and wide to unite our hearts and our interests to those of Mercy Hospital Training School, and to realize our ideals and ambitions in the field of Nursing. Many new and novel experiences awaited us, and, unsuspectingly, we went forth to meet them, affording our predecessors numerous opportunities for merriment—as was ever the wont of Probationers.

But now that we have become more accustomed to the rigorous routine of life in a Training School and have been initiated into many of the mysteries of medicine and surgery, we will strive toward greater class unity and the attainment of honor and glory for our beloved Alma Mater.

ST. BERNARD'S HOSPITAL

Now, more than ever before, education is within the grasp of all who endeavor to push forward. The classes realize that their possibilities for advancement are numerous, and they are striving for the noblest and the best through the opportunities afforded them by their course of studies, and valuable information which they are able to attain through the help of their instructors who give of their best so unstintedly and are ever striving by word and example to lead them on to the highest efficiency in their chosen profession.

Moral intelligence is the most essential asset of a conscientious nurse. It is a requirement that must be fulfilled by those who aspire to prove themselves worthy of their profession. For this purpose the classes here at St. Bernard place their aspirations, endeavors, and efforts under the care and guidance of the Blessed Mother and her Divine Son. Under her mantle of protection they will reach the mark of perfection that is their goal. Holy Mass and Communion has a special place in the life of each novice nurse. Through the faithful practice of daily attendance they will merit the reward of their quest.

To Reverend Mother Murray and the devoted Sisters of St. Bernard's, we, the student nurses here at St. Bernard's, are deeply grateful and extend thanks for their efforts in making our days in this institution happy days—and by their shining example of Christian charity, they lead us on to higher and nobler ambitions.

"Ecce fructus laboris"—behold the fruits of toil. We are at last ready to take our places in the field of duty, equipped with that efficient knowledge and spirit of charity essential to our profession. During our years of training we were met by difficulties and failures, but through the patience, understanding and willingness on the part of those to whom the difficult task of fashioning us into real nurses was assigned we have arrived at the peak of our ambitions—graduation.

In these three years here at St. Bernard's we have had the privilege of participating in various activities, witnessing the dedication of our NURSES' beautiful new HOME, and the SILVER JUBILEE of our ALMA MATER. Both of these events together with the undying kindness of the Religious Hospitalers of St. Joseph have so inspired us that we say in conclusion, "We feel it is a difficult task to our institution's name, but we will attempt to show our appreciation by our immortal loyalty to our ALMA MATER and by successfully serving humanity."

ARCHITECT'S CONCEPTION OF THE STRUCTURE

THE NEW ST. ELIZABETH HOSPITAL

On October 2, 1929, ground was broken for the new St. Elizabeth Hospital, now under construction. The above sketch gives an idea of the structure when completed. On December 15, 1929, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. P. L. Bierman of Evanston, laid the cornerstone. Rev. J. J. Rengel gave the ceremonial address.

In the new building the Administrative offices, Parlors, Consultation rooms, Laboratories, X-Ray and Physiotherapy Departments will be located on the first floor. The second to the eighth floors will contain private and semi-private rooms and wards for surgical, medical, obstetrical and pediatric patients. The ninth floor will be utilized for the Surgical and Delivery Rooms. A beautiful solarium will occupy the tenth floor, and a heliotherapy department will be located on the eleventh. There will be accommodations for one hundred sixty-five patients in the units now under construction.

The Sisters, Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ, hope that this institution devoted to medicine and nursing will meet the needs of the community which they are interested in serving.

Though there be a feeling of great joy beneath it all, there is indeed a touch of sadness and regret in the thought of our graduation from dear old St. Elizabeth's.

To the faithful Sisters, Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ, who have helped and watched our progress during the years of training in this noble career, we, as graduates, owe a debt of gratitude. To our efficient staff of Doctors; our worthy Superintendent and her assistants, all so well qualified to fit us for our work in life; and to those who in any way influenced or encouraged us in the attainment of this long sought goal, may we express our sincere and heartfelt thanks.

Perhaps the only way we can show our appreciation for all that they have done is to pledge our loyalty to the ideals set forth for us. And so it is, with this noble thought ever before us, that we, the class of 1950, wish to make our farewell from our beloved Alma Mater. May we always keep before us that motto we so ardently chose "Vivimus ut Serviamus"—We live that we may serve.

FIVE YEARS HENCE

Five years have passed since the Class of 1930 graduated and our long looked for class reunion day finally dawned, June 24, 1935.

When we reached the Black Cat Room of the Edgewater Beach Hotel several of our classmates had already arrived, Budreau, Mailloux and Haessig, who are at the present time doing private duty and Scholtz who is a Public Health Nurse.

Komisky is at the present time employed as assistant to the well known Charlotte Johnson of the Anna Durand Contagious Hospital. Wirig holds the very important position of Dietitian at Cook County.

Wilson is Superintendent of Nurses at a well known Hospital in India. Twohey and Hendrickson are with the Foreign Missions in Africa and Neuroth is an O B Supervisor in a large Hospital in China.

Zaborski is a Dominican Nun, teaching the kiddies at the Immaculate Conception here in Chicago. Dobesh is a Surgical Supervisor at St. Elizabeth's, wearing the robes of a Poor Handmaid. Mikulec is a novice in the B. V. M. order.

Hyde is a nurse at the Western Electric and Gilchrist and Collins were at St. Vincent's Orphanage for some time, but both Gilchrist and Collins have nurseries of their own now. Hutton took an aeroplane trip to the Rocky Mountains a year ago, but no word has been heard of her or from her since. Fullan is doing private duty.

But one year now separates our fondest and most cherished dreams from their realization. It is with envy that we look upon the Class of '30, who have reached their goal. With deep regret we watch their departure and hope to attain their wisdom and thoughtfulness during our seniority. They were ever helpful during our first hardships and difficulties and spurred us on to greater hopes and ideals. Likewise do we hope to set a like example to those following in our footsteps.

But all is not work as we have participated in many pleasurable events with the knowledge that there is more to follow during the coming year.

Now that we have attained the cherished position of being "Senior Nurse" we eagerly look forward to the goal of our ambition that will bring us to the realization that we must soon part from our training days and enter the ranks of the graduate nurse.

The beautiful and new St. Anne's Hospital received our class, into the Training School during the year of nineteen twenty-nine. We were not only overwhelmed and awed by the greatness of the hospital, but also by the apparent knowledge and dignity of the student nurses. But before our four months of "drudgery" terminated, we realized that their severity of demeanor was, perhaps, more apparent than real.

The pangs of home-sickness were keen at first, but were soon lessened as we fell into the routine, and formed friendships which we hope will continue through the coming years.

Having passed the first milestone creditably, we look forward to the coming years, judging from the past, as years of opportunities, and we trust that we may measure up to the standards set by our predecessors; as we pledge our loyalty to each other and our "alma mater." Sheila King.

OAK PARK HOSPITAL

ST. ROSALIE HALL

It was the year '25 that brought forth a great surprise, an abundance of joy and a new spirit among the student nurses of the Oak Park Hospital, for a beautiful nurses' home was erected for them. The building is four stories high, is of brick structure and accommodates a great number of nurses. On each floor are a number of private rooms, several double rooms and well equipped lavatories. The rooms are cheerful and cozy and offer a great deal of comfort and ease to the nurse who seeks rest and privacy.

A short staircase leads into the lobby where beautiful peasant arches bring forth a touching sense of comfort and luxury. On either side of the lobby are small beau parlors which are exquisitely furnished and add great beauty to the home. Opening directly off of the lobby is a well lighted library which contains large glass book cases of excellent literature, combined with every comfort in the form of large lounging chairs, a long library table, and a divan. The pictures gracing the walls are of lustrous oil paintings. Some are of great historical value, and are of great interest to both residents and visitors.

Standing ajar from the library are the long French doors which lead to the parlor. In the parlor we find beautiful over-stuffed furniture, a cozy fireplace, radio, piano, phonograph and splendid lighting fixtures. Everything that could possibly insure comfort, or happiness for the nurses, is installed in the nurses' home.

The building was given the name St. Rosalie Hall in honor of the foundress of the Sisters of Misericorde. St. Rosalie Hall stands before us with the same graceful beauty, the same comfort, and the same luxuries, and each year there is an added amount of joy due to the increasing number of graduate nurses sent forth.

As we are leaving our school with our much cherished diplomas in hand, a certain little spirit beats within our hearts and seems to urge us on. Onward to offer ourselves to Christ and Humanity. And we're going to do it with all the faith, courage, hope and determination to win, thereby helping our fellow sufferers and by promoting a better citizenship.

The future will be very bright for us we hope, and although we're extremely happy in the thought of advancing into a new world, we are unhappy to leave the one behind us, so let us turn back just for a moment. During our first year we encountered many difficulties as novices in the field of nursing, but with the help of our superiors we overcame them all. We lost no time in getting acquainted among ourselves, and next we organized our class, for with organization comes co-operation.

In 1929 we entered our Junior year, but with the "survival of the fittest" the numbers slightly decreased while in quality we increased. We began to realize the responsibilities placed before us. Many happy moments were spent in entertainments and parties, and our next great event is the Junior-Senior annual party.

We are now looking forward with eagerness to the time when we will be Seniors and setting examples to the underclassmen. For two years now we have been training to take this leadership, and it is with pride and hopefulness to our Senior year which we will endeavor to make of noteworthy accomplishment.

We, the class of 1932, have given ample proof of our ability to shoulder the responsibility which is falling upon us as we advance in our Nursing Profession. The scope of training which is allowed us is very broad and even then we have showed that we have pep and zeal for our work.

We were put on trial before the upper classmen, and we have convinced them that there is an inspiring group of students ready to fill the gaps left when older ones graduate. Well can we remember that first day we entered training school, the lectures which we attended, the tasks which were expected of us, all seemed like massive barriers.

The future is still in front of us and must be conquered with the same determination with which the past has been conquered.

The past year has brought a great change in the School of Nursing at Columbus, for during this time we have become part of Loyola University and closely related with the excellent Medical Department of that institution. By this union the educational rank of the Hospital has become higher and the expanse of the Medical Department of the University has become greater.

The nurses in training are given the advantage of the professorship of men whose training in the field of Medicine is very competent and extended. Likewise the young students leaving medical school have another institution of high caliber open to them in which they may take their internship. Consequently, Columbus Hospital and Loyola University have both gained by this union.

From the portals of Columbus Hospital comes forth this year a class remarkable in many ways. They are one of the most efficiently trained groups that have ever left the halls of this hospital and with their graduating a new era has been reached in the history of this nursing school. For this class, the first to graduate from Loyola University through this institution, has in its twenty-six graduates fourteen Sisters of the order of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, the first nuns of this order to ever graduate from a nursing school.

This class is going forth into the field of duty carrying with them the knowledge and faith they have received during the past three years. They have been trained in profession and faith. It is their duty to carry forth the ideals of the Hospital and the University. They may work always with the confidence that their Alma Mater is ever ready to support them in their actions.

It is with a feeling of regret as well as happiness as we come to the close of this chapter in our life, the graduating class of 1930 of Columbus Hospital. For three years we have toiled in expectation of this day when we leave the ranks of nurses in training and take up our existence as graduates. During our stay in the training school we have experienced many joyful incidents which will always remain ever present in our memory of our days in our old Alma Mater.

There are twenty-six in our graduating class of which fourteen are Sisters. They are the first trained nurses of their order, which is the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, founded by Mother Francis Cabrini. Our class is unique for another reason since it is the first class to graduate from Columbus Hospital since the union of that hospital with Loyola University, an incident which has added color to our days at Columbus.

We thank Mrs. Thornton, our superintendent, for all the interest and kindness she has bestowed upon us while our stay under her guidance.

Some two years ago we came into the ranks of the Training School of Columbus Hospital to begin our life in the nursing world. For the first few days we seemed absolutely lost in our new surroundings, although everyone in the institution tried his best to put us at ease. Gradually the newness gave way to a feeling of security and each and every student began the hard work necessary to reach her ultimate goal, all striving eagerly to gain success.

We are now on the threshold of our last and most important year of our career. We will go on to be Seniors with that same ambitious spirit which has always characterized every one of our endeavors. As we take the leadership over the underclassmen we will strive to leave with them by example the true ideals of our profession as given to us by our hospital and our University.

Here we are, the Freshman Class in this excellent school of Nursing. Our position necessarily implies that we are not to stand out as impressively as the upperclassmen who have been in studies for one and two years longer, but there is no law against telling what we intend to do. From the ever striving spirit for higher things already evidenced in the members of our class it is only probable that we will create history just as impressive in the life of Columbus Hospital as any of our predecessors.

We have the distinction to be the first class to have entered Columbus Hospital after their affiliation with the distinctive University of Loyola. This has aided us in getting an excellent foundation upon which to build our entire nursing career. You shall hear more of our doings in the future as step after step we stride to the peak of successful nursing.

ALUMNI

The ALUMNI

The purpose of THE LOYOLAN is to present the year's history of all Loyola activities in a journalistic manner, rather than an editorial one. But circumstances which have been encountered during the preparation of the Alumni section have uncovered a situation which cannot conscientiously be passed over.

The reporter in charge of the section attempted several times to get information concerning the activities and ambitions of the Loyola University Alumni Association without results. The people approached, some of whom were officers and others who may be considered good authorities on campus affairs, invariably assumed a sad look of despair when questioned and suggested that the reporter see So-and-so. So-and-so proved to know as little and suggested a third person. Eventually the reporter was back where he started and had no information.

This has been regarded generally as the nature of the situation for the past few years, and certain people affiliated with the Association have been unjustly blamed for it. That outsiders should say what is wrong and who is to blame for it would be folly. This Association has met difficulties, no doubt, which are not divulged to the general public. The general feeling is that the University authorities should take a hand in the matter.

One of the first aims of the newly formed Administrative Council is the adjusting of this very situation. The students and the alumni are merely asked to lend, for the present, their good will, and to criticize constructively—not destructively. Will they?

The Editor.

The ALUMNAE

The happy combination of vision and valor made possible the founding of the School of Sociology by Rev. Frederic Siedenburg, S.J., in 1914. A group of women, whose lofty ideals and practical experience bound them in a unity of interest, constituted the initial group of students. These women naturally were impelled to organize in order that they might mutually share each other's experiences and profit thereby. So, the Loyola University Alumnae had its organization meeting in October, 1915.

The Alumnae Association has motivated itself quietly through a series of purposeful activities under the leadership of their faculty advisor, Rev. Frederic Siedenburg, S.J. Over fifteen hundred dollars was spent by the Alumnae in furnishing the sacristy of the faculty chapel on the campus. A bronze plate on the sacristy door memorializes this gift of the members of University Alumnae and their faculty advisor.

Seven scholarships have been established for the training of social workers in the School of Sociology. Funds for these scholarships have been reached through lectures and card parties sponsored by the Loyola Alumnae.

Membership in the organization is open to all graduates of the School of Sociology and to students who have had a specified number of courses in the School.

Loyola University Alumnae looks forward with keen interest to fulfilling its obligations in the departments of Civics, Philanthropy, Education, and Art and Literature. The growing membership of the organization has made possible the grouping of the members into departments, each of which will sponsor one meeting during the year.

Members of the largest graduating class in the history of Loyola University received their degrees on June 12, 1929. The solemn exercises which marked the occasion were held in the Alumni Gymnasium where several thousand people gathered to witness the event.

"Saul of Tarsus" was the title of the address presented by the Honorable Marcus A. Kavanaugh, speaker of the day. Judge Kavanaugh is one of the best known jurists in the country at the present time and, in addition, has gained a most admirable reputation as an author. The address consumed the better part of an hour but the audience, including the seniors who were becoming more anxious every instant, exhibited extreme interest throughout.

Selections were rendered by the Loyola University orchestra at various intervals during the program of the afternoon. The Very Reverend Monsignor D. Byrnes gave the invocation.

The program was closed late in the afternoon with an address "Retrospect and Prospect" given by President Robert M. Kelley, S. J. In it he reviewed to the graduating students the ideals and aims of the University both in regard to its development and to the later life of the students it graduated. He outlined the brilliant growth of the past few years and expressed high hopes for the future.

ELIZABETH M. CUDAHY
MEMORIAL LIBRARY

EDWARD A. CUDAHY
11 WEST MONROE ST
CHICAGO

January 13, 1930.

Dear Father Kelley:-

As a tribute of devotion to my beloved wife, Elizabeth M. Cudahy, it is my cherished privilege to present to Loyola University the Elizabeth M. Cudahy Memorial Library.

I feel that in thus adding to the facilities of this great institution I am recording in a definite and permanent way, my loyalty to my faith, my esteem for the sons of the saintly Ignatius of Loyola, and my desire to further the cause of Christian education.

The most precious of our possessions are not the material things of life, but rather those endowments that make for higher cultural standards. Libraries, those store houses of wisdom, are essential in our educational designs, and to have been the medium through which this library is provided for Loyola, is an honor of which I am deeply appreciative.

It is my fervent wish that the faculty, students and friends of Loyola may find in this memorial, not a mere thing of steel and stone, but a living, vibrant force and an enduring monument to the advancement of learning and those spiritual values in which our securities as Christians and citizens of our country are reposed.

Accept then, dear father, this library. My high hope is that it prove an inspiration and a haven to the thousands who may enroll under the colors of Loyola in our own day and in the generations that are to follow us.

Very sincerely yours,

Rev. Robt. M. Kelley, S.J.,
President of Loyola University,
Chicago, Illinois.

The New Structure.

The cornerstone of the Elizabeth M. Cudahy Memorial Library was slowly settled into position at a private ceremony on January sixth, 1930, with President Robert M. Kelley, S.J., officiating, and in the presence of the students of the Lake Shore Campus. The building was presented to the University by Mr. E. A. Cudahy in memory of his wife who is still living.

The ceremony consisted of the blessing of the cornerstone, the depositing behind it of a small copper box containing several memorials, a short talk by Father Kelley, and the singing of the hymn "Laus Deo" by the students. An official opening ceremony will take place in June.

Fr. Kelley Blesses the Cornerstone.

The
LOYOLA STADIUM

The Loyola Stadium is fairly on its way towards completion. Much remains to be done to make this the outstanding one of its kind in America. Assurances have been given me, and I see no reason to discount same, to the effect that the completed stadium will be ours by the beginning of the football season of 1930.

The present plans call for a double-decking of the West Stand with permanent seats on the East and if necessary, on the North and South of the field. The electrification of the field is now under consideration and it is my belief that this feature will be accomplished along with the building of the field as outlined. To my mind, the lighting of the field for night games, especially during October, would go a long ways towards guaranteeing a successful season from the financial standpoint.

There are a number of very unique features which the committee is working on and which when initiated, I know, will please the student body immensely.

Your Stadium Committee, of course, is depending upon the complete co-operation of the students in bringing to a successful conclusion the program we have in mind.

At this time, I want to take this means of thanking the many students who have assisted the Committee in the work of building the Loyola Stadium.

REV. JAMES J. MERTZ, S.J.

The
MADONNA DELLA STRADA
CHAPEL

Rev. James J. Mertz, S.J., promises that the long awaited and much desired chapel on the Lake Shore Campus will become a reality before many months have passed. Ever since the Arts and Sciences department of the University was moved to the Lake Shore Campus, it has been the cherished ambition and hope of the entire faculty and student body to have a chapel which might be called their own. Since the college has been on the North Campus its religious activities have been confined to neighboring churches and the chapel of the Administration building. But as the enrollment increased conditions became more and more cramped. Some years ago Father Mertz saw the acute need for the erection of a new and larger chapel, and he accordingly took steps in making preparations for the erection of such a building. Funds were collected and then plans drawn up, and now this dream of the chapel is soon to be realized.

The sketch gives some idea of how the interior of the Madonna Della Strada Chapel will look. The simplicity of the decorations, as well as the beautiful harmony of the architectural embellishments, are but suggested in this preliminary drawing, as the actual beauty of the proposed edifice can only be imagined and not portrayed on paper.

The chapel will have a seating capacity of about one thousand. This will easily accommodate all that the Lake Shore Campus will have for some time to come. This will obviate the present necessity of seeking the neighboring church for the weekly student devotions, as well as eliminate the obstacle of insufficient room for all the students, a condition which now exists in the present chapel in the Administration building.

The
MADONNA DELLA STRADA
CHAPEL

AN INTERIOR VIEW.

The main altar will be of the Baldachino or canopy type. There will be four shrines on the sides of the chapel. A large one will be consecrated to the North American martyrs, while the others will be dedicated, one to St. Ignatius, another to St. Francis Xavier, and the third to St. Therese, the Little Flower, and the last one to the Three Youthful Saints.

Mankato marble will make up the interior decoration of the walls and columns, while the vaulted ceiling will be of chestnut wood. In general, the architectural plan will closely resemble that of the recently completed Cudahy Memorial Library, and with it will present two more augmentations to the existing beauty of Loyola's Lake Shore Campus.

Father Mertz has been working hard on his coming chapel, yet funds are still insufficient with which to start building. The many generous people who have already contributed to the fund realize that things cannot be done or begun until enough money is in. Perhaps it is interesting to know that work on churches or chapels cannot be started until practically the entire cost of the construction is available. This ought to conciliate impatient students who complain that the chapel will be ready only for those who come after them.

Particular credit for the boundless amount of work involved in collecting funds for the erection of this edifice must of necessity go to Father Mertz, the man who originated the idea, and who is in complete charge of the arrangements for the new unit. For the past few years he has given whole heartedly of his time and energy in this direction. His work is deserving of the thanks of the students and administration alike.

The College in 1870 comprised both academy and college, the complete course requiring seven years. The three academic years were followed by "Humanities," "Poetry," "Rhetoric" and "Philosophy," successively. "Humanities" corresponded to senior academy and freshman college classes as we know them today.

LOYOLA LIFE

Baggage man.

Boots, boots, boots. Plodding over campus walks.

It's a long, long trail.

One seemingly can't avoid meeting deans. This time it's Mr. Reidy of the Commerce School.

ENTRANCE. From the highways and by-ways of life they come; from homes of high and low degree; of varying accomplishments and talents; prepared to go through on their own or being provided for. Truly the university is a melting pot for the heterogeneous elements of the nation.

Four's a crowd! Rumble seat riders will testify to this.

Registrars and deans make dates without the consent of the other party. Many a good day is spoiled by their notices informing one of the fact.

All the ear marks of a butcher's union.

Even the medics have time for pastimes other than carving and hacking.

The ace was the only one in the holy picture without a halo.

The boys congregate on the front porch to meet the mailman and the bills.

Believe it or not; we're on our way to the chapel.

MAKING FRIENDS. Rather an odd way one might say. True it's not exactly necessary but there's a lot of fun in it and especially so if you're on the right end of the paddle.

Good hunting! The season opens in Oak Park.

Captain Smith scans the horizon from the quarter-deck.

Mundelein College, the Cardinal's answer to the mixed marriage problem, arises.

A turret, if you wish, on the Medical School.

CAMPUS VIEWS.
It's highly improbable that necks are not strained to the limit by every neophyte upon his entrance to school. (There's beauty in more than the hidden fittings.)

Arts Campus; lots of lawn. Nolla coed; daw-gone. (Past poetry.)

It's easier coming out than going into this operating parlor. St. Anne's Hospital is part of the Medical School.

A Reminder.

Students park their blimps or buggies (depending on the circumstances) in the back yard, herewith shown.

Taken before retiring.

Intermission between the piece.

To the colors!

A ringer.

FOOTBALL. The raccoon coat, jazz, and bigger and better football crowds are almost correlatives. Despite their extremes there exists beneath them all a structure which, though sometimes obscured, rests upon a wholesome foundation—youth.

The squad spots Pepsodent, the demon cheer-leader.

Hired for the 1950 season.

All the benefits of the lab given you dear reader without the smell of formaldehyde.

The smoking room is the scene of some intellectual application—at times.

MENTAL ANGUISH. The profligate use of opportunities eventually brings down the wrath of the dean. Said dean speaks feelingly on one's obligations to himself; the high standards of the school; and concludes by bringing down the anathemas of the learned on your brow. Result is intense application for periods lasting as long as two days.

Check and double check! Action in the library.

These, unfortunately, are not the exception but the rule.

Of course, it's all faked. Nurses play poker, or variations of it, all night.

The laying of the corner stone of the new library presents an opportunity of entering the building without fear of an impending fine.

Some obvious posing unless we're being strung.

Business piles up for the rent-a-bus shops.

The ordinary run of orchestra leaders do not wear halos.

SOCIAL LIFE. Of course we don't recommend any let-up in the grind but the faculty insists that youth have its fling.

SUMMER ACTIVITIES. If, during school, one were to suggest that you leave a comfortable bed at four A. M. to do your work mayhem would probably result. Yet a fishing trip or excursion at that hour during summer is quite the thing. That's life, however.

Not only do some people shoot their ways through school but—

The LOYOLA QUARTERLY

In its seventh volume, The Loyolan attempts to suggest again, as it did in its first, the role of Loyola University in the development of Chicago. In compiling the material of this book, the editors have faced the problems and labors with which their predecessors contended. But like those predecessors, they have come away from their work not only with the knowledge that they mastered their swarming difficulties, but that they gained a kind of administrative and literary training which will provide them with a score of advantages in their future work. The retiring staff of The Loyola Quarterly, through having kept alive a far older institution in the school, may count a profit probably less material but no less essential. They have given a large fraction of their time to reminding the student-body that literature is not wholly a theoretical matter, that no literature is so close to a living generation as that which is being written within its own lifetime, and that no piece of writing is so important as that which a man produces himself. The class-room activities of a university—always and indubitably the first consideration—would lack vital assets were they to be deprived of these journalistic enterprises. Certain activities in a school have no organic relationship to its academic ideals. The journalistic projects should be a realization of those ideals in practical terms. The sciences, literature, philosophy, and the arts here find their forum; the entire life of the school-year here finds its chronicle. As attributes of a modern university, both The Loyolan and The Loyola Quarterly have a real responsibility to observe. It is to the credit of their respective editors that this responsibility has been faced, and in so worthy a manner discharged.

LOYOLA NEWS

D. HERBERT ABEL,
Moderator

My first year as moderator of the Loyola University weekly newspaper, the Loyola News, has been one replete with new experiences and the pleasurable friendship of the many students with whom I have come in contact. It has been a most happy year for me in every way. The spirit of the staff members, as displayed through their constant and faithful work on the publication, has made a comparatively easy task of moderating the News.

I feel sure that the time and effort which the individual members of the staff have put into making the News a truly representative organ of the university has been of tremendous value to them. They have learned to write in a clear, concise style about subjects which they have unearthed about the campus through their own research. This independence of thought and action has developed all who labored diligently into better and more capable students. A training has been received which has meant as much to the staff members as the knowledge they have received from class-room exercises. It has been an unquestionably beneficial supplement to the recognized curriculum.

The Loyola News has a firm foundation upon which to build. At present it is recognized as an excellent college weekly, but the members of the staff are looking forward to even greater things in the future. This is a healthy attitude, for once an organization becomes stagnant, it is slipping. I look forward with pleasure to a continued association with the publication. This past year I have found my greatest pleasure in working with the staff, and I can only hope that next year will be as successful from every viewpoint.

YEAR'S HISTORY

*A whole lot of work jammed
 into a little book.*

Gosh!

It's really wonderful to work with a staff that is always alert, always willing, always overflowing with initiative, never in the way, never wasting time, never needing to be told the second time; it's really wonderful. It seems like a dream.

It was a dream, alas. That's why there are a few mistakes in this book which could have and should have been avoided. That's why the book did not appear on the Fifth of May as was originally intended. That is why the poor abused editor was in the mood to use a gat several times during the year.

But now that it is all over and the book is out, successful or unsuccessful, why harangue about how it was done? The real reward for working on a publication comes only to those who actually work, and only in proportion to the amount of work they do.

Those who usurp energy rather than furnish it place themselves in the category of the noble jelly-fish: exceedingly clever but rather useless. We bow to their success if that's what they believe success is.

Several members of the staff have developed an initiative that is really admirable. It is to those few that the success of this book may be attributed.

In preparing The 1950 Loyolan, the seventh volume to be issued, the most outstanding change attempted was one of mechanical construction. In previous years it has been the custom to follow the same general layout in a rather conservative manner. This year, in spite of the fact that nearly every man on the staff was new to the work, new forms were designed throughout. Possibly some of the pages will strike the reader as being somewhat radical and unappealing; yet, taking the book as a whole, an effect is obtained that is rather different from that of the average yearbook.

The present book varies radically, likewise, in the nature of many parts of its literary content. This was done as a result of the general talk to the effect that "no one reads it anyway." If no one does read it, we are safe. It they do, they will weep and tell us at any rate how terrible the book is; then we'll have proof that someone read something. No doubt there are stretches of poor taste. Such is to be expected in anything that varies slightly from the commonplace—but the space had to be filled and at times it was difficult to be serious.

The 1951 Loyolan will be edited by Robert Rafferty, assisted by John Lenihan. Believing that the best policy is to allow the new editor to pick his own staff from the most able members of the past staff and to place them as he sees best the rest of the positions can not be announced.

Joseph Walsh, James Rafferty, Louis Tordella, John Callahan, James Vonesh, Frank Arado, Francis Steinbrecher, Robert O'Connor, Mark Guerin, Frank Arado, John Bruun, Oliver Landreth, Fred Ludwig, and Ed Drolet are the ones who, on the basis of work done this year, should merit responsible positions.

Among the members of the present staff the most outstanding for common sense, ability and initiative was Edward Dowling, Senior Editor. His section was, without doubt, the largest in the book and we leave it to the reader to decide whether or not it is the most accurate and pleasing. However, the real worth of a staff member is sometimes not fully indicated merely by his section. Ed finished his work on time. That's what counts.

It is impossible to ramble over the accomplishments of every member of the staff. Some fulfilled their duties rather haphazardly, others lacked the initiative that was expected of them and others failed completely in fulfilling their trust. Happily these were merely a few. The others worked along in a satisfactory manner and the book was finished after all.

THE SEASON

In spite of what well meaning contemporaries may say in challenge to the claim of the Loyola News as the greatest Catholic college newspaper in America, we still maintain that it is that, and offer as proof volume six, just recently completed.

The beginning of the school year saw a complete change of staff heads, including a new editor-in-chief, which position was taken over by Anthony Tomczak, a new managing editor, John King Bruun, business manager, Thomas M. Poynton, Jr., and, by no means least, a new faculty moderator, D. Herbert Abel, formerly of the Dayton U. News, and the Dayton Journal.

The staff was new, but the spirit of the News was the same. The traditional yearly Fall Frolic was sponsored on October 19, the tennis tournament, though abruptly terminated by the weather before the finals were held, was again held in the early fall, the annual basketball tournament issue, published in March, surpassed in excellence and news content all other former tournament issues, the fourth annual Ho-Hum book was published in May, and the annual banquet, at which John King

Bruun was made editor-in-chief for volume seven, brought to a very fine close another year of success and prosperity for the News.

Such a brief resume of the year's activity hardly does the paper justice, for it says nothing at all about new features introduced, further development of an inter-departmental organization, and the undying promotion of all-university functions.

Further, an account of the News would be incomplete without giving proper credit to several outstanding individual members of the staff. Most important, and probably responsible to a great degree for the success of volume six, was the efficiency of the business department, so nobly managed by Thomas M. Poynton, Jr. With remodeled offices wherein to work, new and adequate equipment and furniture wherewith to work, and willing and talented assistants who co-operated with his plans, Mr. Poynton developed such an efficient business department as would give credit to the most complicated of business offices. Advertising was increased, circulation was expanded, and office records and files for the first time took upon themselves a real semblance of order and efficient arrangement.

The experience in newspaper work, coupled with a true spirit of mutual help and understanding, that was the possession of Mr. D. Herbert Abel, the faculty moderator, added considerably to the editorial and reportorial efficiency of the paper. Being, once, a college newspaper editor himself, he knew the various ramifications and pitfalls of editing so well, that the editor of the News almost did not have to "learn by experience"—he profited by the experience of Mr. Abel.

John King Bruun, the editor-elect, acting as managing editor, and incidentally, as chairman of the editorial board, helped considerably in organizing the departments, and in securing editorials, many of which were commented upon and reprinted by several other college papers.

It is impossible to enumerate the fine work done by others on the staff. Suffice it to say, however, that the work done by each individual on the staff was appreciated by the editors, even though a paragraph is not devoted to them in this article.

And now the Loyola News is looking forward to another year of progress and success, ever working to merit our claim to the title of "The Greatest Catholic College Newspaper in America."

HISTORY

The Loyola Quarterly is the oldest publication of the university. Though changing its name several times during the course of its existence the magazine has always remained essentially one of the same nature.

It was founded in 1888 and after being issued for a period of a few years was discontinued. It was revived in 1901 under the title of The St. Ignatius Collegian and kept this name until 1915 when it became known as The Loyola University Magazine. In 1921 it was again renamed. It assumed the monicker of The Loyola Quarterly then.

The functions of year book and newspaper have been relinquished by The Quarterly as the other publications of the university were established. It is now devoted entirely to literary writing.

some of the literary achievements of Loyola students.*

THE YEAR

It is axiomatic that such endeavors as fail to merit for themselves the place in the sun to which their nurturers would exalt them are often bolstered up to a place of high repute by omissions of fact and the employment of half truths. It is rather a facile method of satisfying the all important ego and also of putting up a strong front to the unknowing.

To summarize the accomplishments and attainment of the Loyola Quarterly in such a manner would be no unpleasant task. One could pass over the discouragements confronted by the few workers when their efforts were ridiculed in fellow publications and by half baked orators; he could forget or laugh aside the insistence of would-be literates that their term papers be handed down to posterity in ten point caps and the offense taken when they were not; and he might even brush aside the realization that pipe dreams, hopes, and plans of the previous summer vacation had not seen their entire culmination.

This is not to infer that the Quarterly failed in its purpose of presenting the student body with such aspirations for literary renown as were inferior to those which in the past made the magazine a leader of its kind. It does signify, however, that the student body is not sufficiently appreciative of the quality of the publication. Perhaps the pendulum will swing. A grind of the first water recently vouchsafed the information that a short story pleased him. Mayhap this is a good sign.

Credit for what the volume has indicated itself to be is especially due to three staff members. William H. Conley, Managing Editor, besides taking care of the majority of articles assigned to contributors, found time to write editorials, Coffee House material and a series of articles entitled "What Price Prosperity?" which gained recognition throughout the country. Thomas L. Spelman, the volatile dramatic editor, employed his adjectives in such an uncommon way that his reviews were nothing short of things of beauty, joys forever, and gems for the people. Ed Dowling, holding a comparatively minor position on the staff, besides contributing regularly and editing his column, found time to do numerous uncredited tasks. The remainder of the staff: Jack J. Lannon, Charles Mann, Francis (What-a-man) Calkins, and Francis Steinbrecher helped by discharging their duties competently.

It is gratifying to the outgoing staff to know that the publication will be in capable hands when the duties of putting out Volume XXVIII begin to assume proportions. An exceedingly able group of freshmen will have advanced to fill the ranks of staff members and contributors who have received their diplomas. The ablest of these, from indications given up to the present, are Louis Tordella, Paul Quinn, John Gill, Joseph Mammoser, John Callahan, John Durkin, William Wilkins, Mark Guerin, William Collins, and James Poynton.

The most willing of the upper classmen to devote their talents to the magazine by contributing were Alex. McGavick, Lothar Nurnberger, Richard O'Connor, Roger Knittel, John Bruun, Julian D'Esposito, Frank Conley, Douglas McCabe, Anthony Tomczak, Roman Zalatorious, and Benedict Spalding. Unfortunately some of the most able of them are graduating in the class of 1930.

The future of the publication, resting as it will be in the hands of such of the talented ones as will return to the university, is assured. May they aspire to more than they can accomplish; relegate personal gratification to the interests of the Quarterly; trust in the good sense of printers and advisors; and encourage writing of such a character as will reflect credit on a worthy publication of a truly great university.

ROBERT JAMES RAFFERTY.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the three major publications of the University there are several others of varying importance.

The Della Strada is a monthly newspaper published by Rev. James J. Mertz, S.J., in the interest of the Maria Della Strada Chapel. In addition to giving news concerning the progress in the drive for the Chapel it contains a regular message from Fr. Mertz to the students and to friends of Loyola.

Mid-America, formerly the Illinois Catholic Historical Review and still published by the Illinois Catholic Historic Association, is the official organ of a society so closely related to the University that it may well be called a University publication.

Ciscora is the organ of the Chicago Student Conference on Religious Activities. The paper consists of eight pages and is issued monthly by a staff consisting entirely of Loyola Students. Thomas Downey, the Editor, is assisted by Martin Walsh and Thomas Murphy, Assistant Editor and Circulation Manager, respectively.

The Bur is published by the Loyola College of Dentistry to provide the latest news in the Dental Profession to the members of the alumni. It is published quarterly and contains valuable information.

The Dentos is a yearbook published by the students of the College of Dental Surgery along the same lines as The Loyolan although on a smaller scale. Harold Salzman edited the 1930 book.

The Loyola Educational Digest contains the current news in the educational field in a condensed form. The Educational Department under the direction of Dean Austin G. Schmidt, S.J., of the Downtown College publishes it.

The
LOYOLA UNIVERSITY
DEBATING CLUB
and the
SOCK AND BUSKIN CLUB

The growth of debating activities at Loyola is, without question quite remarkable. The splendid trips and the excellent schedule arranged by Robert McCabe, the manly showings of the team at home and on tour, the fine spirit of the semi-public debates, makes this year Loyola's greatest.

In no small way has the success of this year and the successes of the past three years been aided by the splendid leadership of the president of the Debating Club, William H. Conley. His friendly personality, his scholarship, his ability to speak, his willingness to help the less fortunate members of the club have made him the outstanding figure in the history of Loyola's forensic activities.

The Sock and Buskin Club has functioned most successfully during the past season. This was due in no small way to the inspiring way in which work was carried on by the two outstanding men in the club, Ted Connelly, President, and John Bruun, Business Manager. Under their leadership spirit was high and success was practically assured throughout the year.

The
DEBATING CLUB

WILLIAM H. CONLEY
President

"Debating is one of the major sports at Loyola," was the tribute paid to the forensic endeavors of the University by Dr. Starr, head of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Indiana when he presided over the debate between the Ramblers and the Hoosiers at Bloomington in March. Truly, the record of the debaters this year in addition to past achievements marks Loyola as one of the forensic centers of the nation. Her name is known from Boston to Los Angeles and from Detroit to New Orleans.

The success of Loyola in the debating and oratorical world is outstanding not only because of victories but because of the initiative on the part of students themselves which have made victories possible. Under the guidance of a skilled coach, by means of individual initiative, and through balanced team work rather than individual glorification the organization has not only collected a long line of impressive victories but has performed a function in the University by providing training which cannot be received through any other medium.

In spite of the continued success of the club there is one thing which marks the entire organization. It is never satisfied with the past but is continually striving for still greater heights. As long as that spirit is predominant Loyola will continue to be known as a debating center, will continue to be known as a contender for the national debating championship, and will continue to be known as a University where the opportunities for a complete education are still made use of.

Individual stars do not make Loyola nationally known. It is the spirit of the entire organization. With that spirit which becomes more intense every year she will continue her climb to fame. As those of us who this year had the opportunity to guide the debating course pass on the administration to other hands we feel our efforts will be but mere shadows of the work which will be accomplished in the future.

Thirty-four intercollegiate debates with schools of recognized forensic caliber; two trips through the southeast, totaling more than 4500 miles; numerous semi-public debates held in all sections of the city—thus we briefly summarize the largest and most successful season in the history of the Loyola University debating club.

Realizing that friendly relationships are far more valuable than judges decisions, Loyola, contrary to the policy of most schools, has debated ten different questions during the past season. These ten topics were discussed in thirty-four contests, seventeen of which were non-decision debates. Of the remaining, Loyola won ten and lost seven.

The season was officially opened on December 15 with Indiana University as the first opponent. The topic of this debate, one of the most interesting and important questions of the season, was: Resolved: that the principle of the chain store is detrimental to the best interest of the American public. William Conley, John Bruun, and Robert Murphy, all veteran debaters, upheld the affirmative for Loyola, before the student assembly. Charles Boyle acted as chairman, before an audience that was about equally divided concerning the winner. No decision was rendered.

After a two month's intermission, the debaters from the University of Louisville met and defeated Loyola before the student body of Sacred Heart College at Lake Forest. Murphy and Bruun again spoke affirmatively on the chain store question, with Conley as chairman.

Later a rather unique and very interesting question was discussed with the men from the University of Cincinnati; Resolved: that higher education should be reserved for those of superior ability. Edward Dowling, James Rafferty and William Conley took the affirmative, and though the debate was officially a non-decision affair, the students of Longwood academy, who comprised the audience, seemed to favor the local men. John Lenihan acted as chairman.

Two days later, Charles Mallon and Thomas Downey represented Loyola in a debate with Lincoln Memorial university, at Mercy High School. Lincoln Memorial upheld the affirmative of a much discussed question, Resolved: that the nations should adopt a plan of complete disarmament, excepting such forces as are necessary for police purposes. Joseph A. Walsh acted as chairman before an appreciative audience of about 1000 girls.

Standing: ROBERT MURPHY, JAMES RAFFERTY, JOHN BRUUN, THOMAS DOWNEY. Seated: WILLIAM CONLEY.

On Sunday morning, March 2, William Conley and James Rafferty left for the south to compete in twelve intercollegiate debates. Of these they won eight, lost two, while two were no-decision contests.

Two days later, as the home debaters, composed of Joseph A. Walsh, Louis Tordella and Robert J. Murphy, were given a unanimous judges' decision over Detroit University, Conley and Rafferty won a critic judge's decision from Loyola of New Orleans.

While Rafferty and Conley, team "A," were enjoying the Mardi Gras at New Orleans, team "B," composed of John Bruun and Thomas Downey engaged in a no-decision contest with Washington University at St. Louis.

Continuing their tour through the picturesque southland, team A defeated Howard College, Lincoln Memorial University, and Center College, discussing in these debates variations of the disarmament question. Downey and Bruun won their next debate with Southeast Missouri State Teachers, and then lost three debates, to Southwestern College, Birmingham Southern, and Emory, the only thing to mar an otherwise successful schedule.

As the travelling debaters were making the name of Loyola famous in the south, two more home debates were held, one with the University of Florida, the other with St. Louis University. The Florida debate was presented before the students of St. Xavier's College by Edward Dowling and Robert Murphy, with Joseph Walsh as chairman. This also was a nondecision debate on disarmament, Loyola opposing this policy. The St. Louis debaters continued their string of victories by defeating Charles Mallon and John Durkin, both freshmen, on the disarmament question, at Alvernia.

After a brief stay in Lexington, Kentucky, famous for its fine horses and women, Conley and Rafferty, having engaged with the University of Kentucky in a no-decision contest, proceeded to the University of Louisville where they won a debate on the chain stores. Then journeying to Indiana U, where Robert Murphy joined them, another no-decision debate on the chain store question was held. Four more debates completed the schedule of team "A." A victory from Indiana State Normal College, also on the chain store topic; a defeat from Wabash College on the affirmative of the Lake-to-ocean-waterway; a decision over Purdue, which was given in the form of a three to one verdict of an audience numbering more than 500; and the second defeat of the entire trip, suffered at the hands of Manchester College, brought to a close a most interesting and valuable itinerary.

The final, and undoubtedly the most interesting debate of the year, was held on Tuesday evening, April 15 before an appreciative audience at the Loyola Community Theater. In this debate with Purdue University, on the very attractive question, "Should intercollegiate athletics be abolished?" Loyola was represented by "Bill" Conley, and his teammate, "Bob" Murphy. Opposing Loyola's best, were Charles "Stretch" Murphy, nationally famous basketball man, and "Eb" Caraway, of football and baseball fame. Loyola's Charlie Murphy acted as chairman. No decision was rendered.

THE JOHN NAGHTEN DEBATE

With the increased interest in forensic endeavors at Loyola, it is little wonder that the John Naghten debate aroused the enthusiasm of the entire student body. Four members of the debating club survived the preliminary contests, and were chosen to compete for the John Naghten medal, significant of the debating championship of the university.

Held before a large audience at the St. Ignatius Auditorium, the four veteran debaters argued the question, Resolved: that the five day week should be adopted in all American industries. Upholding the affirmative, were John Keating and George Ray, the latter, the winner of the Carter Harrison Oratorical Medal. Richard Ford and Robert Murphy presented the case for the negative. Three of the debaters had distinguished themselves on the trip through the east, just a few months previous to this contest, and the fourth man, Robert Murphy, participated in all the home debates of the season.

A critic judge's decision was rendered by Professor Bernheimer, a member of the Northwestern University School of Speech. According to his decision, the negative won the debate, and Richard Ford was awarded the Naghten medal. Mr. Ford, who was president of the debating club during the 1928-1929 season, had distinguished himself as a debater during the four years he spent as a member of the debating society, and the debating championship of the university brought to a fitting close his admirable forensic career.

CARTER H. HARRISON ORATORICAL CONTEST

Climaxing a brilliant college career, Charles A. Boyle, a senior in the Liberal Arts college, won the Carter H. Harrison Medal, emblematic of the oratorical championship of Loyola. Boyle, with three others, delivered his winning oration at the assembly of Lake Shore Campus students, on April 2. Choosing as the subject of his speech, "John Marshall and the Constitution," he very aptly showed what a prominent part this great soldier, scholar and statesman played in the formation of this sacred document.

At the elimination contest held early in March, in which members from the Law school also participated, six men were chosen to compete in the finals. Only four of these men, however, engaged in the final contest: Boyle, Paul Quinn, who ranked second, Robert W. O'Connor and John Durkin. A critic judge's decision rendered by Reverend Edward F. Garraghan, S. J., gave Boyle 15 out of a possible 24 points.

Boyle, who is also president of the student council, one of the highest honors a Loyolan can obtain, is, despite the fact that he works eight hours per day outside of class time, an active member of the Sodality, the Loyola News staff, and the debating club. Since his entrance to Loyola, he has endeared himself to the faculty members as well as to the students, and his victory in this contest, is one of the most popular decisions ever rendered at Loyola.

Not long after the rigors of registration and its accessory tribulations had passed away at the Downtown College last fall, the happy thought occurred to a few members of the Day Law School that there should be a law debating organization. Since there was no adequate means for training the future lawyers in the art of speech, which is so essential to their success, the proposal met with the immediate approval of the students and the faculty.

The work of organization fell to Sidney DeLove, formerly of Valparaiso University, and Larry Crowley, formerly of the Loyola Medical School. DeLove was elected president of the new organization and Crowley took over the difficult task of manager of debates. Under their guidance a number of students made use of the opportunities offered for development of forensic talent.

The work of organization was soon accomplished and the work was then begun to schedule debates and procure locations to hold them. Because of the enviable reputation of the University Squad in previous years little difficulty was met on the part of the lawyers in scheduling important law schools.

The matter of staging the contests offered a more serious problem. Chicago, not being particularly interested in such things as debating, proved a poor field for the contests. Since the debaters could not leave town for every debate the only solution lay in the radio. While the allotted time was short for an adequate presentation of arguments the possibility of an audience made the radio debate the more desirable means of staging the contests.

The nucleus of the squad this year was made up of Sidney DeLove, Al Brown, John Waldron, Edward Hubke, Neal McAuliffe, Larry Crowley, Lee Hosea, Edward Drolet and Edmund Neimera. Their efforts have been rewarded with success far beyond that which could be expected for the first year. The initiative of the men responsible for the organization and the success of the endeavor is another manifestation of the spirit permeating Loyola forensics. Mr. James W. Milne, a prominent Chicago attorney, coached the team.

The organization fills a long felt need in the Law School for some outlet for forensic ability and for practice in speech. The enthusiasm of the faculty and the interest manifest by the students in the new club assures those interested of its continued success. The organization has received the good wishes of the various schools of the University who hope that this organization may represent the law school in the same capable manner that the Varsity squad represents the University in the forensic world.

“The Loyola Debating Society was organized on the 10th of November, 1875. Its object is to promote the cultivation of eloquence, the acquisition of sound knowledge and a taste for literary studies.”

With Ted Connelly at the helm, the good ship "Sock and Buskin" has battled its way through another year of highly successful dramatics. Aided by two score devout followers of things histrionic, Connelly piloted the old show boat into two major performances and out again with colors flying. The first to pack the Loyola Community Hippodrome with thousands of contented customers was "Turn To The Right" and the second opus which had the public packed in solidly from the orchestra pit to the peanut gallery was "The Call Of The Banshee." And because that same public could not be denied, two one act plays were offered them toward the end of the year. These shorter comediettas were received as enthusiastically as the full length plays.

Working for the first time in conjunction with the Loyola Community Theater, the productions were highly successful both from an artistic and a financial viewpoint. The arrangement provided that the Sock and Buskin Club retain its identity and that the Community Theater present it under the Community's auspices.

While Ted Connelly can claim the lion's share of credit for the progress of the Club, lest we forget (and lose our lives thereby) there was a woman in the case. Miss Virginia Barker, known first and foremost as an actress of distinction and proven ability, is second and next most the vice-president of the organization. It was she who was Ted's right hand man, (no, you can't say that) well, she was his right hand lady, and no little honor is rightfully hers. The secretary of the group was Thomas L. Spelman who capably handled the correspondence and such. John K. Bruun held the office of Business Manager and put in a strenuous year trying to make jingle on the cash register.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

"Call a rose a violet, and still you aint got a rose"—James Hammond in the "Call of the Banshee."

Names are funny things—especially the Loyola dramatic club's. At first glance "Sock and Buskin Club" has about as much meaning as the Abendpost's editorials in the News Tower. But then, if you are a representative Loyola student with a natural bent for ferreting out mysteries, you are not supposed to be satisfied with a first glance. You must have the perseverance to look up the meaning in Miss Ryan's Emporium or at least to ask George, the Greek, at George's restaurant.

The club was started back in the good old days at St. Ignatius. For years it flourished as a dramatic society under the name of Sock and Buskin Club. It seems that the name was derived from the costumes of the ancient Athenian actors. In those days you never knew when you saw a man sneak up and plunge a dagger into an unsuspecting back whether he was a dastardly villain or whether he was only fooling. This led to complications, and they decided something had to be done about it. So they passed a law requiring all comedians to wear high socks, and now even the great unwashed could tell the Charlie Chaplins from the John Gilberts. To make identification even more certain the tragedians found themselves the subject of another amendment. It was their duty to wear a kind of half shoe, known in those days as buskins. Now to come back to St. Ignatius. The dramatic club was portraying both the humorous and the more serious sides of life and it was fitting that they choose a name which embraced both. So they borrowed the word "Sock" symbolizing a comedian and the word "Buskin" associated with the tragedian. And joining these two words into a corporate form, the "Sock and Buskin Club" was born. The name, therefore, has a real significance.

It was not until five years ago that the club was reorganized upon the Lake Shore Campus of the university. There was a vital need for dramatics and it was Mr. Steggert who first recognized this and volunteered to sponsor the rebuilding of the club. He was successful from the start, because he found a great number of students who were interested. A couple of plays were given the very first year. The name Sock and Buskin Club was retrieved from the ashes of the former group. When Mr. Costello took over the direction of the club a little later he built upon that foundation.

It has been the custom of the club to put on two major productions and several one act plays during the school term. This provides an outlet for the dramatic talent which floats around the various campuses. While the club was reorganized upon the North Side, it is by no means an Arts activity. During the last few years a great amount of talent has been secured from the Loop campus and the professional schools. A former president was a medical student, and the vice-president this year pursued her studies at the Sociological School.

Mr. Charles S. Costello is dramatic director. So much has been written in the past about his capabilities as a coach, and since he is now recognized as one of the foremost in his field, it is useless to eulogize him further. He has been ever successful in his contacts with the actors in securing their greatest measure of good will, and the high and well-merited praise which has followed all his presentations is magnificent proof of his abilities as coach. His reputation is established and whatever we might say here could neither add to nor detract from it.

PLAY PRODUCTION CLASS TAKES PART IN "LITTLE OLD NEW YORK," PRESENTED BY LOYOLA COMMUNITY THEATER

THE PLAY PRODUCTION CLASS

Organized at the beginning of the year, the play production class was a vital factor in the success of the Sock and Buskin Club plays. Under the direction of Mr. Costello, the class assumed complete charge of the staging, and this meant that the scenery was constructed, painted, and set up for all the performances of both plays. Besides this, the lighting, properties and costumes were taken care of by members of the class.

In order that all the time would not be spent backstage Mr. Costello included the members of the class in the mob scene of "Little Old New York" so that some experience in acting would be acquired. This Community Theater play was well received and produced about a dozen times, and before it finished its run there wasn't a member of the class who didn't feel like an accomplished performer.

As a final and conclusive test of what had been learned during the year the class was divided into two sections and each one produced its own one act play. The members of the group chose the plays themselves, selected the casts, directed them, drew plans for the set, ordered the lumber, constructed the set, painted it, took care of the lighting, made arrangements for costumes and properties, and finally produced the plays before an audience which was enticed to St. Ignatius Auditorium. The first play to be presented was "Box and Cox" which was acted by a faculty cast. The second was "A Night At An Inn" acted by a group of capable students.

MR. COSTELLO DIRECTS SCENE IN "THE CALL OF THE BANSHEE"

"TURN TO THE RIGHT"

(December 9th and 10th)

"Turn To The Right" was the first of this year's two major productions. Presented at the Loyola Community Theater, it received a splendid welcome and exceptionally large crowds were on hand for the two performances.

The acting of James Brennan and James Hammond featured the show as did the excellent interpretation of the old mother by Coletta Hogan. George Dunlap, Jr., starred in the role of the son. The other roles were capably played by James McGuire, Frank Calkins, Eugene Cerise, Dominic Mastriani, Frank Casseretto, James Spackman, Anne Kreger, Barbara Dieter, and Mary Puerte.

"THE CALL OF THE BANSHEE"

(February 24th and 25th)

A mystery play was the second offering of the year. This was "The Call of the Banshee." James Brennan acted well the part of the mysterious Dr. Lacey, and the old doctor and friend of the afflicted family, Dr. Markowitz, was ably handled by James Hammond. Thomas L. Spelman was the Hindu servant and the villain of the play. Coletta Hogan was Mrs. Grimes, the superstitious housekeeper. Josephine Magner and Virginia Barker had the roles of the young girls, and the humor was provided by Virginia Gill as Hilda. Berniece Crawley and Ardine Jaeger found themselves cast as darkies. The part of Peter Adair was taken by Joseph Mammoser, and Jerry Kozlowski played Tom Scott. Linda Perkins was taken by Catherine Gill. Dod Norton and Ted Connelly were the arms of the law.

GRACIANO SALVADOR,
Director

MUSICAL ACTIVITIES

It is only three years since a small group of music lovers at Loyola gathered together under the leadership and inspiration of the ever-tireless Dean Reiner and organized into various musical units. At first it was a band; next came a glee club; then a choral society; and finally this year another one was added: an orchestra.

We have, therefore, four musical organizations which, notwithstanding their shortcomings due to the lack of general support from the student body, are actually resting on a firm basis. This basis is the genuine love of music burning in the hearts of the members of these different units, their spirit of sacrifice, their splendid goodwill and co-operation. The basis being such, we may well rest assured that these musical units will never die out at Loyola. Their splendid past achievements during this last year testify to this wonderful spirit of the will to accomplish.

As a moderator and director of these organizations, I wish to take this opportunity to extend to them collectively as well as individually my most sincere thanks for their splendid co-operation and wonderful response to my humble efforts.

Graciano Salvador.

MUSIC AT LOYOLA

The rapidity with which Loyola changed from an entirely unmusical institution to the position which it now holds is due mainly to the efforts of Professor Graciano Salvador, who has directed the Glee Club, the Choral Society, and the Band with untiring enthusiasm since their inauguration, and to Dean Joseph Reiner, S.J., who while not directly affiliated with any one of the organizations has aided them all by lending his moral support.

All three groups were organized within a few months of each other just a little over two years ago. Since then they have come to assume prominent positions in the list of Loyola activities and possibly no organization meets as regularly and with more zest than these three.

As may be expected there has been adverse criticism on the part of students and others who are not fully aware of the position to which music has been relegated at the University until within the last few years. None of the organizations claim perfection but they all claim, and rightfully, that they are making an admirable effort and a distinct step toward it.

Nothing will give more encouragement to these societies than the moral support of the students and no organization will return more in the way of spirit to the students than these, especially the band, when fully developed. Let's give 'em a hand!

The Loyola University Band has completed a successful year under trying and cumbersome conditions. The director, Graciano Salvador, had a difficult task to muster together the players for the first football game, but due to his dynamic personality, he overcame the difficulties and sallied forth with a first class band. By October 5, the band was well organized, and the following week, October 12, they participated in the official dedication of the athletic field.

When the St. Louis delegation arrived in Chicago on October 26, with their well organized band, the Loyola University band, encouraged by the enthusiasm of the student body, and the aggressiveness of the football team, played their best. Next in order was the engagement with De Paul at Soldiers Field, on November 2, where the Loyola band, in competition with St. Mary's, St. George's, and De Paul's bands, showed the City of Chicago how Loyola compared with outstanding competitors.

At the last game of the season, against North Dakota on November 30, due to adverse weather conditions the Loyola band was unable to play. However, their appearance on the field was appreciated by the spectators, and the members sung the school song to add atmosphere to the game.

When the basketball season was opened, the band was at hand to play at all the home games, and judging from the response of the spectators, it seems the band was well appreciated. By this time their reputation had become so great that they were invited to play at the National Catholic Basketball Tournament. The band played for five nights during the tournament, and offered keen competition to the championship band from De La Salle High School. With the close of the basketball season, the activities of the band were brought to a finish. The members were rewarded for their work with sweaters and letters, which they well deserved.

Three short years have elapsed since the Glee Club under the direction of our ever energetic Mr. Steggert was founded with a nucleus of fourteen members. This organization has turned out to be one of the most valuable assets that Loyola University possesses. Mr. Steggert was forced after a month to relinquish the reins of directorship to Mr. Salvador, due to outside work of a most pressing nature. His great desire has at last been realized, namely that of having a glee club of fifty male voices. That goal was attained this year when the membership reached fifty-five. Although new numbers have been added frequently during the three year period of the Glee Club's existence, still the memory of that musical duel of those fourteen members lingers on in the mind of all those that heard it back in the fall of 1927, namely "Spanish Cavaliers" and "Solomon Levi."

The Glee Club continued as in the past to offer various programs at the weekly student assembly. Its first public appearance of the year was given in December in conjunction with the Choral Society at St. Ignatius auditorium. This was the occasion of its second annual Christmas Concert. The first part of the program consisted of the following numbers: "Silent Night," "Pilgrims' Chorus," "The Viking," "Last Rose of Summer," "Sweet and Low," "See the Conquering Hero." The second part of the program was devoted to the rendering of Hawley's "The Christ Child." This Cantata has been claimed by music critics to be one of the most beautiful and melodious cantatas that has ever been written. The solo numbers were very well taken care of by the Messrs. Keevins, Stalzer, Stauder, Wagner; and the Misses Barron, Braasch, and Walsh.

At the start of the second semester the Glee Club underwent a reorganization process. Only those members who were best fitted to carry on the musical activities of the Club were retained. Work began in earnest for the preparation of our Third Annual Spring Concert, which was given in May. The group was forced to dispense temporarily with the practice due to the unforeseen demand on the part of the public for another rendition of Maunder's Cantata "Olivet to Calvary." The Choral Society had previously presented this master work the past two years and now were asked to give it at various parishes throughout the city. It was given in the following churches: Sancta Maria Incononata, Assumption, St. Anthony's Notre Dame, and St. Peter Canisius. This Cantata recalls to the mind of the public simply and reverently the scenes which mark the last few days of the Saviour's life on earth, and some of the reflections suggested thereby. It was a very appropriate number for the Lenten season. The solo numbers were taken care of by the Misses Braasch, Barron, Murray, Walsh; and the Messrs. Keevins and St. Pierre.

After fulfilling these engagements the Glee Club was urged to assist the Loyola Community Theatre in the presentation of their Lenten Drama "Everyman." This has been the first time that an outside organization has requested the services of Loyola University's Glee Club to assist in their undertakings. The Glee Club sung the Gregorian music for the offering of "Everyman."

Finally after the Easter holidays the members once more set down to practice for the Spring Concert. It was given about the middle of May to an overwhelming crowd of musically inclined listeners. Again the Club was requested to give the program out of town, namely at St. Patrick's High School at Desplaines, Illinois.

Although the Glee Club did not offer any radio programs this year, several of its star soloists were heard from time to time over the air during "College Hour."

The year finally closed with a banquet and dance at one of the leading hotels in the loop. Here the faithful attendance members were given a token of remembrance by the Club and they in turn expressed their deep appreciation for the untiring efforts of the director, Mr. Salvador who was always ready to offer the benefits of his careful and skilled training at a moment's notice. Also a vote of thanks was given to Father Reiner for the manner in which he so frequently co-operated with the Club from time to time during the year.

With the great success that the Glee Club and Choral Society has enjoyed this past year the present officers at this time sincerely wish a continuation of this success in the years to come to those that are to follow in making a name for Loyola in the field of music.

The Loyola University Choral Society represents one of the most outstanding achievements in extra-curricular activities that the University has seen for many years. The male members were brought together easily enough by the existence of the already well established Glee Club on the Lake Shore Campus. But the securing of enough good female voices was a real problem in the eyes of Mr. Salvador. Inasmuch as the Downtown College, the only department in which co-education exists to any degree, does not attempt to sponsor or foster such activities the entire work fell upon Mr. Salvador as an individual.

By spreading the word through his classes in that Department, however, the Director of Music aroused interest at once among the young ladies. A sufficient group was immediately found and the Loyola University became an established reality for the time being.

The next most fatiguing difficulty met with was the arrangement of practice sessions. Many of the men were employed, invariably at different hours, many in the club lived at distances too great to be asked to remain late at night, and a favorable location for practice was lacking. But somehow, probably due to the determined driving power of Mr. Salvador, the Choral Society has gained an admirable reputation. Popular support from the student body is growing rapidly and a great future is assured.

The St. Cecelia Band, which has now been in existence for about six months, is quite a novelty in that it is the first nurses' band in Chicago. Much of the credit for the success of the organization may be attributed to Mr. Guido Matte, the bandmaster. To him, to Mother Murray, our devoted directress, and to Sister Jarrell, the members of the band are deeply indebted and feel that through their support and encouragement the band has been made possible.

The band is composed of members of the Junior Class. The first concert was given on December twenty-eighth and proved at once to the faculty that there really was talent in the group. However, we have a great deal to learn, and some "static" to overcome.

We hope to make our band a great success worthy to take its place with the other high standards of St. Bernard's School of Nursing.

The students in our school are very proud of our new endeavor and all have pledged us their loyalty and support.

THE CECELIAN CHOIR

The Cecelian Choir was organized at Mercy Hospital several years ago and has since developed and improved until it now contains forty members, all of whom are student nurses.

The original intention was merely to provide a slight deviation from the daily routine of the nurses and at the same time offer a pleasing and valuable opportunity for the girls to develop their musical talents. It has become so efficient, however, that it regularly furnishes the music for religious services at the hospital on all occasions including Sunday and Holy Day Masses, Benedictions, and Requiems.

By meeting twice a week for practice and rehearsals it has become possible for the group to attempt musical compositions exceedingly difficult and to master them most admirably. Many voices have been developed to a degree which is most astounding considering the fact that the entire idea of the choir is a matter of enjoyment rather than duty. The different voices, which include lyrics, mezzos, dramatics, and contraltos, possess real authority and under careful, efficient training, graceful phrasing, pleasing crescendos, and stout climaxes are reached.

Much of the success of the Cecelian Choir is due to Sister Mary Thomasina, under whose direction it has developed.

Bi-monthly bulletins are sent to the parents or guardians, to inform them of the deportment, diligence, proficiency, and attendance of their sons or wards.

The
SODALITY

THE YEAR IN BRIEF

This year saw the continued efficiency of the Sodality, its regular weekly meetings, the usual activities, and a few extraordinary events that individualized the year. A most recent event was the Solemn Mass, Special Sermon and Solemn Benediction in atonement for the outrages of the Soviets. The Student Conference on Religious Activities held three Conventions during the year, at Visitation High, Providence High and Alvernia High, and at the last Convention steps were taken to make the National Convention, to be held in June at The Palmer House, the center of activity of all Chicago School Sodalities.

The four sections, Catholic Action, Catholic Literature, Missions, and Eucharistic, have each had their usual round of labors and successes. Christmas Boxes of huge proportions were sent to the Indian Missions and the missions of British Honduras. The most commendable feature of the Sodality's year was the regularity of attendance at the weekly meetings.

Fr. T. J. Schulte, S. J.

RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES

THE CHAPEL

THE LAKE SHORE CAMPUS SODALITY

In promoting and increasing the spiritual welfare and the personal sanctification of the students as individuals, and in carrying out a campaign to help our less fortunate brethren in other climes, the Lake Shore Campus Sodality has enjoyed a year of marked success.

During the year the Sodality was able to turn over a substantial sum to the missions through the collections at the Friday morning Masses. An "old clothes" day brought in much useful material for the Indian Mission in South Dakota. Through the co-operation of the bookstore, a campaign for the sale of Christian Christmas cards was carried out during the two weeks preceding the Holidays. More than fifteen hundred cards were placed in circulation. Later on a penny collection helped purchase the candle holders for the new Della Strada Chapel.

Besides this group effort, the Sodality has been able to give each individual member something very valuable. The brief talks by the moderator, Fr. Schulte, at the weekly meetings gave the students many useful pointers.

In conclusion, the Sodality has successfully related for its members the religious spirit with their daily student duties. It has aided them in bringing more Christian principles to bear in their lives, and in so doing has made them more sincere and more active Catholics.

The first of that series of religious events which has characterized Loyola, was the Mass of the Holy Ghost celebrated on September 27th, at St. Ignatius Church. Each year a Mass of this nature is offered up in order to ask the Holy Spirit to shower His graces upon the students in their scholastic trials and labors. The Mass was featured by the first appearance of the Senior Class in cap and gown. Many parents and friends of the students were gathered in the church for the services.

The second event of particular interest to Sodalists was the eighth assembly of the Chicago Catholic Students' Council on Religious Activities, commonly known as Ciscora. This meeting was held at Visitation High School on the Southwest side on November 1, 1929. It was another success from every point of view. The attendance record showed over five hundred representatives from thirty-one high schools and colleges in the Archdiocese of Chicago. In the election of officers for the coming year Loyola University was again chosen as president.

The yearly Mass in memory of Michael Cudahy, one of Loyola's most generous benefactors, was held late in November. The student bodies of the Academy and College were present.

The Group

On December 4th, at the usual Friday morning Mass, twenty-nine candidates were received into the Sodality. Fr. Schulte officiated at the reception, and was assisted by Prefect Emmett Meagher and Secretary Douglas McCabe. This addition of new men, mostly Freshmen assured the Sodality of a reasonably large future membership.

On Saturday, February 22, the Ciscora held its Ninth general meeting, this time at Providence High School. At the Mass, held before the meeting a fair sized crowd was present, and by the time the convention opened it had swelled to the enormous gathering of 1200, the largest of any convention of Ciscora. Fifty Catholic High Schools and Colleges were represented. The subjects discussed were: personal holiness, the Boy Scout and Girl Scout movement among Catholics, Catholic literature and Catechetical Instruction. Emmett Meagher, representing Loyola, presided over the meeting.

The concluding meeting of the year was held at Alvernia High School on May 19. The special feature of the gathering was a four cornered discussion of Catholic higher education. A representative from Providence High gave a paper on the girls' high school, Rosary College presented a paper on the Catholic College for women, while St. Ignatius spoke on boys' high schools, and Loyola University on the College for men. William H. Conley delivered this last paper.

This meeting was also honored by the presence of Fr. Lord, the national director of Sodalities. He outlined the plans now under way for the National Convention of Sodalists, which will be held at the Palmer House in Chicago, in June.

THE EUCHARISTIC SECTION

The Eucharistic section of the Sodality might well be considered as the most important section of the four sections that comprise the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary. It has for its purpose: "Personal devotion to Jesus Christ, our Lord, in the Holy Eucharist." It entertains motives such as the sponsoring of weekly Communion, the backing of the "Four Minute Men"—those who make brief visits to the chapel, the managing of the acolythical service for the weekly masses. It also takes up a survey each month of the Communions Received, Masses Heard, and Visits to the Blessed Sacrament, not however in order to check up on the students, but rather to strive to stimulate all by a knowledge of what everyone is doing.

John J. Hackett, Chairman.

THE LITERATURE SECTION

To foster reading of Catholic Literature by both Catholics and non-Catholics constitutes one of the principal aims of the University Sodality. With this end in view organized effort has been directed toward the dissemination of Catholic periodicals of every kind by the Literature Section. Catholic magazines and papers have been distributed throughout hospitals and have been placed in public centers, and various other places where it was thought that the distribution would bring results.

The basic principle around which this section of the Sodality is centered is that if an intense interest in Catholic literature can be secured many circles of people outside the reach of the missionary efforts of the clergy will be influenced.

John Klest, Chairman.

KEARNEY

THE MISSION SECTION

The Mission Section of the Sodality is probably one of the most active and at the same time least heard of sections. Due to the untiring efforts of the vice-president, Robert Healy, we have this year distributed a great amount of old clothes which were collected during the Pre-Christmas Drive. A great many students and the families as well as friends responded generously to the call for castoff clothing, toys, etc. All of these articles were sent to the Indians of South Dakota.

In addition to the small regular collections made at the Friday Masses the entire fund remaining in the treasury at the end of the year is sent to Mr. Marshall Moran, S.J., an ex-Loyola student who is now a Missionary in India.

Joseph Kearney.

THE CATHOLIC ACTION SECTION

The Catholic Action Section of the Loyola University Sodality bears the distinction of being the first one to be established in the United States. Its activities, because of the nature of the work, necessarily take on a pretentious program. During the past year considerable emphasis has been placed on lectures and debates, wholesome recreation for parish organizations, catechetical instruction, lay retreats, Holy Name membership and activity, participation in civic, state, national and international thought with solution to problems formulated from Catholic doctrine, and the complete projection of religion into every activity of the student's life. The aim of the section is to impress upon the students that the theory of the Catholic religion, which they have studied throughout their entire school life, must be applied. The success of the Catholic Action section can be measured only by the Catholic Lay Action of the graduates of Loyola.

THE PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS RETREAT

The Annual retreat for the students of the downtown and west side branches of the University was held in the early part of March, at the downtown school. Fr. McDonnell, a missionary, conducted the exercises, while the entire program was under the supervision of Fr. James F. Walsh, S.J., the dean of men of the professional schools.

Considering the fact that none of the students were obliged to make the retreat, the large turnout throughout the retreat was in no small measure due to the efforts of Fr. Walsh. Not only were the downtown students in evidence but a goodly delegation from the Medical campus was also there. A retreat of this nature is very difficult to bring to the reach of many people, since the students of these departments of the University have classes at very different times of the day, and many of them work during their out-of-class time. Moreover, the medics had to come into the loop to attend the services.

Owing to the fact that there is no chapel at the downtown building, a lecture room was used for all the services. With special permission Holy Mass and Benediction were celebrated there on the closing day.

LAKE SHORE CAMPUS RETREAT

The Annual Lake Shore Campus Retreat opened Tuesday morning, October 1, and closed the following Friday. The services were held at St. Ignatius Church. Father John P. McNichols, S.J., president of the University of Detroit conducted the daily exercises.

The choice of Fr. McNichols as spiritual director was indeed a happy one. The retreat of the previous year conducted by Fr. Lord, well known for his prominent work, especially in the field of Sodality organization, set a particularly high standard. But this year's students were equally appreciative of Fr. McNichols' work.

The annual retreat has always been considered one of the most important events of the school year, and consequently every Catholic student of the Arts department is required to attend. In the matter of retreats, as in other classroom and extra-curricular endeavors, much of its success was conditioned on the fine co-operation of the students and faculty. When the students were urged to give the retreat conductor every opportunity to help them, they responded with most noticeably fine conduct during the three days. This year's retreat has already taken its place as the most successful of all similar exercises of the past.

The student body and the faculty have already expressed, and will continue to express their thanks to Fr. McNichols for his interest in Loyola and for his fine retreat.

THE DELLA STRADA LECTURE CLUB

With the organization of the Della Strada Lecture Club, about six years ago, the students of the Arts and Sciences department have tried in some way to express their appreciation to Fr. Mertz, by aiding him in carrying out his plans for the erection of the Lady of the Wayside Chapel. Begun by a group of men especially interested in this work, the club has continually increased in membership and activity, and at present about fifteen students are actively engaged in this instructive work.

Men skilled in the art of public speaking, and possessing a knowledge of religious topics, have travelled throughout the city and there, before intensely interested audiences, they delivered their illustrated lectures. These talks, covering a large field of subjects, were made even more interesting by stereopticon slides depicting scenes in the lives of Marquette, Joan of Arc, the Little Flower, and the Jesuit Martyrs of North America. Especially well adapted to the phases of these talks, these slides were reproductions of actual photographs having a historical as well as an aesthetic value.

In keeping with the general spirit of aiding the chapel, these men turned over the entire proceeds obtained from these lectures to the fund being raised for the building of the Lady of the Wayside Chapel. The large number of active freshmen and sophomores engaged in this work, insures continued success to the work of the Della Strada Club.

Realizing the need for an organization to promote the spiritual welfare of the women students of the Downtown College, Rev. Frederic Siedenburg, S.J., true to Jesuit traditions, organized a sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary on April 27, 1925.

The Maria Della Strada Sodality meets for the recitation of the Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary and for a conference conducted by the spiritual director, Rev. Frederic Siedenburg, S.J.

An annual Retreat for the members of the Sodality is offered. This year the Sodality made arrangements to have their Retreat at the Cenacle. At the request of members of the Sodality a Day of Recollection has been arranged for the Sodality members to be held at the Convent of the Cenacle on March 30.

Women students interested in the Maria Della Strada Sodality are requested to call upon the Dean of Women.

The above picture is of the Sodality at St. Bernard's School of Nursing. Practically every student in that department belongs. Owing to the fact that it is practically impossible to get a representative portion of the Maria Della Strada Sodality of the Downtown College together at one time, a picture of the group could not be obtained.

SOCIETY

THE SENIOR BALL

The finale of the 1928-9 Social Season at Loyola sounded as the last strains of the well known waltz wafted through the dancing figures, a tribute to our departing Seniors. The Senior Ball was beyond doubt the grandest and socially the most successful dance of the season.

A magnitude of credit for this success goes to the Loyola Union. The Union worked in co-ordination with the Arts Department and with the aid of the entire University brought to a climactic close the Social Calendar of the Year.

This dance differed from other Senior Balls by admitting students from all classes and all departments. Heretofore Seniors alone enjoyed this privilege of attending these affairs. The Loyola Union hoped that by setting a precedent that all future Senior Balls would be open to the entire University in view of the fact that this dance marks the final social function of the year. The number of bids, however, were limited to Two hundred and fifty. The demand far superseded this number but the only consolation that may be offered to those less fortunate—if it may be considered consoling—is: "Remember the early bird," etc.

The Grand March was led by Charles La Fond of the Downtown Commerce Department and Miss Marie Lane. The Arts Department was led by Jack Ennis and Miss Lorraine Schreiber. Incidentally, both couples have since been married.

The music was furnished by "Tweet" Hogan's Syncopating Merry-makers while the Oriental Room at the Knickerbocker Hotel was favored as the site for the Ball.

LA FOND

THE SOPHOMORE COTILLION

The Sophomore Cotillion, now an integral part in the Society of Loyola, made its debut on January Eleventh. This affair was truly characteristic of a real Sophomore dance. The syncopation was furnished in great abundance and in all varieties by Kenny's Red Peppers. The Red Peppers are—well everybody knows how good they are!

The crowd was one of the most congenial and jovial of any group that has ever attended a Loyola dance. Throughout the entire dance the floor was filled to capacity with a gay, fun-loving group.

The Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Sherman was chosen as the scene for the Sophomore dance. Tables about the sides of the dance floor were filled with pleasure seekers enjoying refreshments gratis. Father Schulte of the Lake Shore Campus and Dean of Men at that College acted as Faculty chaperon for the evening.

The evening whizzed by and almost unexpectedly and certainly undesired by all came the final waltz of the evening. And so we find brought to a close the Sophomore Cotillion of Nineteen hundred thirty, successfully rated with the best of the season.

Much of the credit for the success of this dance must go to Herb Stanton, President of the Sophomore Class on the Lake Shore Campus, who with the backing of the Loyola Union, secured the enthusiasm of the entire student body. Every Department of Loyola was well represented. If we look real closely we can see Herb glancing quite demurely at the camera from the center of the picture. Lookit! He must be an old man! He has a moustache, hasn't he?

THE FRESHMAN DANCE

The first all-university Freshman Dance ever presented at Loyola was held in the Oriental Room of the Knickerbocker Hotel on February twentieth, 1930, and resulted in one of the most interesting social affairs of the year.

Jack Higgins appeared again with his orchestra, popular and well known among Loyola students for the last four or five years, offering all the scintillating music that anyone could desire; vocal choruses by Ed Keevins, tenor from the Arts Department; snappy saxophone solos by the other two Higgins: "Rus" and John; and clever little toots and snorts by the entire orchestra.

The support of the Loyola Union contributed much to the success of the affair. Every department of the University was well represented and—oh, what a swell collection of ladies attended that dance! It has been said since that no social function in the history of Loyola ever had so many good looking girls. In fact, someone said that there wasn't a single one there that wouldn't have carried off honors if she'd only try. That ought to be a little bit of cheer to those who were there.

At the well filled tables around the floor, drinks were served continuously—of course they were soft drinks, this being a freshman dance—and everybody was hopping around on the dimly lit floor with nothing but good time to think about.

Report has it that Charlie Mallon, President of the Freshman Class on the Lake Shore Campus and Johnnie Durburg from the Medical School were passing out half pints of something or other to all their friends but all their friends denied it when interviewed later. Anyway everybody had a good time whether these two fellows had anything to do with it or not.

THE JAMBOREE

The Second Annual Jamboree was one of the numerous events sponsored by the Loyola Union which reflected credit on the newly formed organization. (There is only one meaning in that statement—it was good credit.) John White, President of the Loyola Union, who was in charge of the affair, procured Tomczak's Blue Kittens for the evening.

The evening began with a basketball game between Detroit University's Titans and the Loyola Ramblers who were seeking their twenty-ninth consecutive victory. Due to the fact that Detroit refused to make any attempt to score when they had possession of the ball the Ramblers were forced to come out of their defense and force the play in Detroit's territory. As a result the Titan's fast breaking game ran up a lead which they held until the final few minutes. Charlie Murphy eventually took the situation in hand and scored two baskets in the final moments to bring Loyola a 12-10 victory.

As soon as the teams had left the floor, dancing began. At various intervals tag dances were held. How those stags did go for them! The girls, many of whom had been invited from neighboring schools, were monopolized. Eventually the basketball players appeared on the floor and the process was reversed. The bashful Rambler captain was forced into another and even more exhausting contest: one of endeavoring to sit in the stands for a few minutes to rest. The women just don't know where to stop.

THE ARTS STUDENT FACULTY BANQUET

On a Thursday evening, the fifth of December, 1929, about one hundred and twenty-five members of the student body, the alumni and the faculty of the Lake Shore Campus met at a dinner at the Bismarck Hotel.

The principal speaker of the meeting was Mr. James J. Kelly, a prominent Chicago attorney, who brought out in his talk the real value of religion in the educational world. "The day is approaching" stated Mr. Kelly, "when the people will recognize that the salvation of the country is dependent entirely upon the education given in the parochial and other Catholic schools in the country." Mr. Kelly's experience and friendly manner won the good will of those present almost instantly. The talk was enjoyed throughout by everyone.

Father Theodore Schulte, S. J., Dean of men, and Mr. Aloysius Hodapp, professor of economics, represented the faculty with short addresses in which they brought out the salient features of the educational system now in use and the value of student extra-curricular activities.

Charles Stimming, former president of the Student Association represented the Alumni while William H. Conley, President of the Debating Club brought out the views of the students.

Dean Joseph Reiner, S. J., concluded the evening by comparing the extra-curricular activities with a musical symphony, each of the four divisions having a definite important function without which the whole would not be complete.

Charles Boyle, President of the Student Association, acted as toastmaster for the evening, promoting enthusiasm intermittently with his clever remarks.

COMMERCE STUDENT-FACULTY BANQUET

The Pre-legal and Commerce Schools of Loyola held their annual Student-Faculty Banquet at the Midland Club late in December.

The toastmaster of the evening was Mr. E. A. Glasser. Mr. Glasser at the opportune moment introduced Judge Joseph Burke of the Municipal Court of Chicago. After a splendid speech by Judge Burke, Mr. Glasser called upon the speakers of the evening who, in the order of their appearance, were: Reverend Frederic Siedenbug, S.J., Reverend J. F. Walsh, S.J., Dean T. H. Reedy, Mr. Peter Angsten, and Mr. Charles H. Gallagher.

This banquet afforded the students and the faculty a means that has long been sought of meeting each other on a social as well as an educational plane. In spite of the fact that all the students are attending night school with practically no time for social affairs, the Commerce men have created a spirit and feeling of mutual friendship that can compare favorably with that of any other Department.

After the speeches were completed many of the men retired to the parlors of the club and here enjoyed a brief smoker while several interesting discussions were held.

Several hours later the meeting disbanded and the men returned to their respective destinations well pleased with an evening of enjoyment that also afforded them the pleasure of knowing and becoming better acquainted with each other.

SIGMA LAMBDA BETA FORMAL

The annual formal dinner-dance sponsored by the Sigma Lambda Beta Fraternity of the Commerce School was held on Saturday evening, November 23. The scene of the festivities was the Dutch Room of the Bismarck Hotel.

The men in charge of the affair: Messrs. Johnson, Norris, LaFond, Cole, and Slingerland, outdid themselves in their efforts to make the dance a successful one. The tables were placed in crescent shape with the dance floor completing the circle. This arrangement was particularly satisfactory because of the ease with which the floor could be reached from all locations and the geniality which naturally arose due to the close grouping of the parties.

The committee secured the services of Anthony Tomczak's Campus Orchestra for the evening and Tom's gang did super service until one of the more effusive of the girls insisted on sitting on the clarinet player's lap. This, though slightly disconcerting, did not cramp the style of the orchestra on any numbers excepting the more difficult movements such as Piccolo Pete and Horses.

A lavish dinner was served at about eleven o'clock with the cuisine of the Bismarck doing credit to the long established reputation of the hotel. During the course of the evening carnations were passed out (don't ask why) and with difficulty suspended on the tux lapels (don't ask how). The air was filled with streamers, confetti, and yelps of regret as the orchestra finally played its last number at two o'clock and the crowd wended its way to the cloak room and from thence onward.

PI ALPHA LAMBDA FORMAL

Pi Alph has a reputation for throwing swanky dances. The first Pi Alph Formal of the year was no exception to those of the past which built up the reputation which the fraternity has for sponsoring pre-eminent social affairs.

The dance was a closed affair; no bids were sold and no effort was made to induce outsiders to attend. The party was, therefore, exclusive; the crowd congenial—nearly all being intimate friends; and fraternity spirit dominated the entire attendance.

The scene of the activity was the Petit Salon of the Sovereign Hotel. Jack Higgins, a Pi Alph himself, and his Royal Purple Orchestra furnished the heat, playing until shortly after two o'clock. Despite the fact that Bill Conley was called back to Sharon (not because of it) the dance was entirely successful.

One who has been in the Petit Salon realizes only too well what an ideal place it is to have a dance. The depressed floor with the tables surrounding it, soft lights, flying streamers and pretty girls all combine to make a dance an auspicious affair. The only fly in the ointment was the confetti on the steak. Several over enthusiastic waiters insisted in handing out the serpentines during the dinner and the air and plates were both deluged. No casualties resulted.

The favors, small bill folds with the fraternity crest in colors impressed upon the surface, were exceedingly novel and ingenious. In all it was a most fitting way to open the social season for one of Loyola's outstanding fraternities.

THE FALL FROLIC

The fifth annual Fall Frolic, sponsored by the Loyola News for the incoming freshman class, opened the 1929-30 social calendar of the University.

The Lake Shore Athletic Club (not a part of the Lake Shore Campus) furnished the locale, and the date was October 19. Jack Higgins, of Chicago, Twin Lakes, and Loyola, directed his ten-piece band of merry-makers in a truly merry-mad rhythm so characteristic of his orchestra. Ed Keevins, Arts Junior and a new member of the orchestra, featured with cornet and tenor solos.

The decorations committee, headed by Daniel J. Murphy, had adorned the spacious ballroom in a novel and thoroughly appropriate manner. Suspended from the balconies were thousands of copies of college newspapers from all parts of the country with penants and banners of all the leading schools.

Despite the fact that the Lake Shore Athletic Club had been the recipient but a few weeks before of one of the choicest products of a local pineapple-throwing union there was no unseemly restraint weighing upon the happy throng. Apparently, the youth of the city were more willing to take a chance on seeing Chicago from the air than to miss the great event. They were reassured, too, by the unworried attitude of John Kardinal Brunn, the tuxedoed gentleman who stayed afterward to finish the punch and collect loose pearls. At any rate, five hundred couples enjoyed a romping evening.

PHI MU CHI FORMAL

The formal dance season of the Lakeshore Campus was opened by the Phi Mu Chi Fraternity on November 9th with a dance that will long be remembered for more reasons than one.

Le Petit Salon of the Illinois Women's Athletic Club was the place. The room, which is supposed to be an exact reproduction of a night club in France, is exceedingly novel. The walls are hand-painted to correspond perfectly with the lighting system, the latter owing much of its success to its lack of intensity. (Come, now! Come, now!)

The master of ceremonies for the evening was Ray Jerome Binder, graduate of St. Ignatius College, and, at present, social director of the I. W. A. C. The features of the evening were the acts and specialty numbers by Mack Murray and his partner, Jack Lomas, stars of the Follow Thru Show Company. Much of the credit for the social success of the dance goes to the committee which was composed of Edward Garrity, Herbert Stanton and Daniel Murphy, with Joseph Mooter acting as chairman.

The syncopation was furnished by Phi Mu's own Herb Stanton and his Collegiate Orchestra. They produced that kind of music that delights all fraternity men and makes co-eds go "oo." Tiger Rag, Saint Louis Blues, and Sweetheart of—Phi Mu Chi were all plunked prettily from Herb's banjo.

All too soon did that magic hour of three roll around when this hotter than hot band began to boil over and the fire had to be quenched by the homeward trek of the merry throng.

“Popular music is of many different types. There is the catchy two-step, the waltz, the rag-time oddity, the sentimental song—generally trash, and the so-called comic song. Some of the prettiest numbers now current are: ‘The Jumping Jack’s Jubilee,’ ‘Hot-Scotch,’ and a novelty two-step called ‘Sky-Rockets.’ We mustn’t forget the ‘Goo-Goo Man’ and ‘Incandescent Eyes.’ Everybody’s whistling the new minstrel curtain-raiser ‘Hallelujah,’ and ‘If I Were You and You Were Me.’”

St. Ignatius Collegian, 1904.

ATHLETICS

DANIEL J. LAMONT,
Athletic Director

FAREWELL

This year has seen the passing of Loyola's most outstanding and colorful athletic figure from the annals of our ever-rising institution. The departure of Dan Lamont from Loyola has darkened considerably the outlook for the future from an athletic viewpoint. It was during the administration of Mr. Lamont as Athletic Director and Head Football Coach that Loyola first began to advance by leaps and bounds; it was during this time that the stadium changed from a vague dream into a lasting reality; it was under his able guidance as head football coach that Loyola was able to place its best team on the gridiron—a team which emerged from a most difficult schedule with six wins, one tie and two close defeats.

It is with much heart-felt sorrow and sad recollection that we give up Dan Lamont to Washington University where we hope and know that he will enjoy the greatest measure of success, happiness and true friendship. Farewell, Dan!

REV. THOMAS J. POWERS, S.J.,
Faculty Moderator

The ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT

Who doesn't know the man who has been getting so much done for the athletic department? Dan Lamont, youthful yet brilliant Athletic Director and football coach, to whom is due Loyola's phenomenal rise on the gridiron, not only developed a superb team but he built a splendid stadium for it to play in, and he built that stadium at a time and under circumstances which made older and wiser heads than his declare that it simply could not be done. He is gone now, to take a coaching position at the University of Washington, but, no matter who may be the man or men who assume the two positions which he simultaneously held at Loyola, and whose task it will be to finish the now half completed stadium, no one will ever deny that that stadium and the future teams which shall play in it owe their existence to the business acumen, the courage, and the genuine "school spirit" of Loyola's beloved son, Dan Lamont.

But it must not be supposed that Dan is the only one associated with the Gym who possesses these qualities, for they are to be found also in the person of Loyola's "Little General," Bob Morris, Graduate Manager, Alumni Secretary, and Chairman of the Board of Directors of the National Catholic Basketball Tournament. Unselfish, unassuming, hard-working, cool-headed, lovable Bob has so ingrained himself into the very fiber of the Athletic Department that his name and its name are synonyms.

Bob shares his office with the most genial fellow in the world, Earl Kerns, Physical Director, and coach of the Academy swimming team.

ROBERT MORRIS,
Graduate Manager

The Dental School is represented in the Gym by Harold Hillenbrand, Publicity Director of the University and Executive Secretary of the National Catholic Basketball Tournament.

Another man as closely connected to the Gym for the past four years as its doors is James C. Ryan. Courtney, once student manager, has never been able to shake off the lure of the gym and is usually running around doing something for somebody and not getting credit for it.

The name of the attractive and efficient young stenographer in the Gym is Jeannette, and she is a member of the famous Smith clan.

Then there are Doug McCabe, the Superintendent of the Gym, and his assistants, Chuck Cuny, Manager of the Billiard Room, Jack Strobel, Manager of the Tank Room, and Tom Kearns and Vin Clark, life guards.

RYAN

Hovering about all these individuals, encouraging them, advising them, and helping them, is Father Thomas Powers, S.J., Faculty Adviser of Athletics, Director of the Tournament, and, since the departure of Lamont, Athletic Director. It is easy to talk to him and easy to listen to him, and when you make a mistake he can bawl you out without rubbing it in too hard. It requires a great deal of oil to keep a complicated Athletic Department running smoothly, especially when it is situated in the line of fire between the coldly calculative world of business on the one hand and the realm of profound thought on the other, and Father Powers is just the man to provide it.

LOYOLA AND SCHOOL SPIRIT

Does the school spirit of Loyola compare favorably with that of similar universities and colleges throughout the country? One must consider the scattered nature of the university, the diverse interests of the student bodies, and the fact that contests of a competitive nature are but a recent development of the University.

The attendance in such considerable numbers of appreciative and spirited crowds at the football and basketball games bodes well for the future of intercollegiate athletics at Loyola. Those who oppose their continuance charge that the atmosphere is not a wholesome one, that the dollar is put before the game itself, and that the paramount idea is to win at any cost. Any observer, no matter how disinterested, could not help but note and admire the spirit of the men playing in the games and that of the students on the sidelines. The opposing team is treated in a courteous and sportsmanlike manner; "home team decisions" are entirely eliminated; and unnecessary roughness, booing, and disputing of decisions is entirely absent. Coach Sachs has gained a nation-wide reputation as the coach who never questions a referee's verdict. Pittsburgh papers rapped a home university for their conduct when Loyola was beaten there but not any one connected with Loyola followed suit. Loyola, if no other neighboring university does, refutes the charges of the antagonists of college athletics. There are abuses even here but they are fast being done away with.

The student body is becoming more and more conscious of the value and renown of their university; the university officials are doing their best to advance the standards of the school; and more and more the ideals of a great university are being widespread by staunch backers. Is not that the real criterion of the much used term, "school spirit"?

“There is a fine opportunity for some generous friend to endear his name to the rising generation . . . by building and founding a gymnasium worthy of the college . . . Eight or ten thousand dollars would be required for the purpose.”

Early Annual College Bulletin.

FOOTBALL

COACH DANIEL J. LAMONT

Dan Lamont was head football coach during the past season and succeeded in leading the most successful football machine in Loyola history through its most strenuous schedule. This was his first full year as head coach and, we are sorry to say, his last.

The squad worked hard for Lamont and it was this together with the fighting spirit which he instilled into his charges that made it possible for the Ramblers to enjoy the success which they did. Any coach would be proud of Lamont's record and they all envy him his personality and his influence over those with whom he comes in contact, both on and off the field.

LONG

RYAN

Mr. Lamont had an efficient coaching staff this year and a great deal of credit is due them for the wonderful success which the Loyola gridders enjoyed this season. The vital importance of a competent coaching staff is little realized and consequently praise for the assistant coach is seldom heard. However, any member of Loyola's staff would prove worthy of any university or college in the country and, both individually and collectively, they are to be commended for their splendid work.

The head coach's right hand man and chief adviser was Dr. Edward J. Norton, a former star of Loyola and now a practicing dentist. Norton specialized in backfield work and is well-informed as to its every phase. Eddie can also demonstrate it in a manner which any "back" would be proud of.

The line-coaching was taken care of by two former Detroit stars, Sod Ryan and Harvey Long. They both played regular tackles for the undefeated Detroit team of 1928. It is an undisputed fact that the Rambler line of the season just finished was the best in Loyola's history. Ryan and Long worked hard, and the answer to their toils is found in the very limited scoring done by opposing teams. A New Orleans paper on one occasion stated that Loyola of Chicago had "the best coached team that played in the south during the season of 1929." This is due in no small measure to the Ramblers' line and their coaching by Ryan and Long.

Phil Brennan, captain of Loyola's 1928 team, was freshman coach. Before the season was ended he had turned a squad of carefree and inexperienced freshmen into a group of high-spirited and promising ball players. The freshman team of this year was a source of inspiration to the varsity and demonstrated, on more than one occasion, that it excelled all other campus organizations in school spirit. A good deal of this was breathed into them by their coach, Phil, who, besides teaching them the fundamentals, also instilled in them that spirit which all winning teams must have.

CAPTAIN "CORNY" COLLINS

The Rambler football machine of 1930 was led by a diminutive and scrappy quarterback whose undying spirit and winning personality kept his team mates "on edge" throughout the season. Loyola teams of former years have boasted many stars but did not enjoy the success of this year's eleven due to a different mental attitude—and for this Loyola and its followers can be thankful to its little leader, "Corny" Collins.

The captain has won for himself the distinction of being one of the most accurate passers in Loyola's history besides being a good ball-carrier and a vicious blocker and tackler. "Corny's" ball-toting was hindered somewhat this fall because of a knee injury sustained early in the season and even with this he always proved himself to be a thorn in the side of the opposing eleven.

LOYOLA 12—OKLAHOMA 0

The Ramblers played an inspired brand of football in their opening game in the new stadium. A brilliant gallop around right end towards the close of the second quarter by Les Molloy accounted for the first score, while Boy Weimer boosted the ante to 12 by blocking and recovering a Goldbug punt after which he personally conducted it twenty-two yards to the goal line. The tries for extra point failed to materialize and the scoreboard showed 12-0 as the spectators started homeward and the warriors hid their sweaty selves to the fieldhouse.

LOYOLA 6—COE 0

On dedication day, October 12, the Loyola gridders chalked up their second victory of the year, when they humbled the Kohawks from Coe to the tune of 6-0. The score does not indicate the Rambler's superiority over the boys from Cedar Rapids, however, and it was due only to inopportune penalties and a costly fumble which deprived the Chicagoans of at least three more touchdowns. The lone score came in the second quarter when Bob Burke tore loose for a pretty 50 yard jaunt to place the oval on the ten-yard stripe. Two plays later he twisted over the goal-line, into the promised land for the only score of the afternoon. The game ended with the ball on Coe's 2 yard line.

LOYOLA 6—DUQUESNE 7

On October 19, Dan Lamont brought his charges to Pittsburgh, "Jinx-town," and after a game which proved to be a veritable nightmare, came out on the short end of a 7-6 count. The Ramblers outclassed their opponents in every department of the game and it was only in the closing minutes of play that the Smoky City boys were able to negotiate Loyola territory. It was then that they completed two passes and scored when Burns snagged a 30-yard pass from McCarthy. Donelli booted the pigskin through the crossbars for the deciding point. A 25-yard pass from Molloy to Burke in the third quarter netted the lone marker for Loyola after which Flynn's kick missed by a scant few inches. What a whale of a difference just a few inches made.

LOYOLA 12—ST. LOUIS 0

October 26 was Homecoming Day and a good time was had by all. The Ramblers handed "the strongest Billiken machine in the last decade" a 12-0 thrashing after a beautiful display of football technique. In the third quarter Flynn gathered in a pass from Les Molloy that was good for 40 yards, placing the ball on the Saints' 37-yard line. On the next play Molloy slashed off right tackle and raced the remaining distance for a touchdown. Towards the end of the fourth quarter Marty Griffin, standing on the Billiken's 25-yard line, heaved a pass to Connelly who snared it on the 15-yard mark and ran into the end-zone to complete the day's scoring.

Loyola 255 yards from scrimmage, De Paul 67; Loyola 19 first downs, De Paul 2; Loyola 13, De Paul 0. Thus went the November 5rd game at Soldier's Field, which was played before 51,000 spectators for the Catholic College championship of Chicago. It was Loyola from start to finish. The score was kept down due to numerous substitutions on the Rambler team; practically every member of the squad saw action. Flynn scored the first touchdown in the second quarter when he received a 20-yard heave from Molloy and scampered the remaining 25 yards for a marker. Bob Burke scored again in the fourth quarter after he, Flynn and Molloy had advanced the oval to the three yard stripe from deep in De Paul territory.

LOYOLA 6—LOYOLA (New Orleans) 6

The Ramblers travelled south to engage the Loyola Wolves of New Orleans on Armistice night, November 11. It was the first performance of the Chicago boys under lights; New Orleans boasted the most torrid heat wave in years; and the game was played, from start to finish, in a driving rain. These obstacles failed to stop the Ramblers, however, and even though the score was knotted at 6-6, they managed to collect 16 first downs as against 2 for the Wolves. The Chicagoans' score came late in the first quarter when Flynn plunged over from the ten-yard mark. Lopez carried the scoring honors for the southern boys when, early in the third quarter, he took the ball over from the five-yard line.

LOYOLA 21—SOUTH DAKOTA STATE 7

The Ramblers had a comparatively easy time in turning back the South Dakota Jackrabbits on November 23. All three of Loyola's touchdowns resulted from long, steady marches. Flynn scored the first one when he crashed over from the four-yard line in the second quarter, afterwards plunging over for the extra point. Griffin accounted for the next marker in the third period, placing the pigskin in the end-zone after racing over from the twelve-yard mark. Burke kicked goal. The third was made possible when Molloy, late in the same quarter, piled through the entire Jack-rabbit team for 13 yards and a score. Burke again booted goal. Playing recklessly in the closing minutes of play the Dakotans completed many passes and, incidentally, slipped over a touchdown and threatened another.

LOYOLA 0—NORTH DAKOTA 7

Meeting the only team which outplayed them throughout the entire season, the Loyola gridders fell before the all-mighty Nodaks from North Dakota on November 30 at the Rogers Park field. Although playing without Molloy, the star half-back who was seriously ill, the Ramblers proffer no alibis and pay due respect to any team which can crush the powerful Creighton team 54-0 as did North Dakota on the previous Saturday. The only score of the game was made in the third quarter when Jarrett circled Loyola's right end for 25 yards and a touchdown. The seventh point was allowed when Loyola was off-side.

LOYOLA 26—LOYOLA (NEW ORLEANS) 6

On their second trip to the south, the Ramblers 'went to town' and defeated Loyola of New Orleans 26-6 on the afternoon of December 22. It was a banner day for Flynn and Collins, the former scoring three of the Northerners four touchdowns and the latter calling his plays faultlessly. Flynn scored early in the first quarter after he, Molloy and Burke had advanced the oval to the 2 yard line. Burke booted the extra point. History repeated itself and early in the second period Collins heaved a pretty pass from the 16 yard line and Burke gathered it in for another score. Two brilliant runs by Flynn in the third quarter, the first for 15 yards and the second for 10, told the tale of the third and fourth touchdowns respectively. Connelly ran over for the 26th point. Lopez scored for the Wolves when he raced over from the five yard line in the final quarter.

THE FRESHMAN SQUAD

This year's Freshmen, under the able tutelage of Phil Brennan, varsity captain of 1928, developed and came along in great shape. As an answer to the initial call, a collection of embryo All-Americans came out. Huge, gawky youths from the rural districts, city-bred lads, fellows who were all-state and all-city players, others who were playing football for the first time, were all on hand to receive the toil-worn outfits of last year's varsity.

After a few weeks those who had come out merely to get in the squad picture dropped out and only the hale, hearty and courageous remained. Then the real work of developing an outfit strong enough to cope with the powerful varsity began.

Playing Lake Forest Academy and Marquette Frosh in the only two games of the season, the "Big Green" lost the former and tied the latter. These games, however, were no criteria of the class of football which the Frosh displayed in their scrimmages with the varsity.

There were no outstanding players on the Freshman squad, although a goodly number of the yearlings look like promising candidates for next year's varsity.

“Once every month, in the presence of the Faculty and students, badges of distinction for proficiency, and testimonials of good conduct and diligence, are bestowed upon the most deserving.”

BASKETBALL

LEONARD D. SACHS

Ace of American Basket-Ball Coaches

Loyola's unusual rise in sporting circles in the last few years is mostly due to Leonard Sachs and the basket-ball teams he turns out. When Sachs came to Loyola he found difficulty in scheduling any other than the smallest and most meaningless college teams in the district. During his brief stay he has given Loyola a nation-wide reputation and has done much to make basket-ball leadership and Loyola synonymous.

During the past season he turned out a team which made a world's record for consecutive victories despite the fact that only two regulars were available at the start of the year. This remarkable string includes victories over champions of every part of the country. Probably Mr. Sachs' greatest achievement was developing Murphy into what Minnesota's coach called, "The most finished college basket-ball player I have ever seen."

With an abundance of prospective stars available Loyola looks for the continuance of her basket-ball reputation under Coach Sachs, the cleverest and most sportsmanlike coach in the nation.

CAPTAIN
CHARLES "FEED" MURPHY
All-American Center

For four years Charlie Murphy has led Rambler cage squads from his position at center and during his three years on the varsity he has been regarded by his teammates and Loyola followers as the finest player that has ever worn the maroon and gold. For sheer perfection as a ball handler he has no equal in the country, and this, coupled with bodily grace seldom found in one of his size, make him an ideal floor man. His willingness to sacrifice individual scoring opportunities for team play merited the name "Feed;" yet, when the games were tightest and the opponent defense strong he was always able to grab high scoring honors.

For two years he was relegated to all star teams to a position after his namesake from Purdue but at the close of the past season his superior ability was recognized and he was named on all authentic All-Westerns and All-American teams as the regular center. Murphy graduates this year and his persistent geniality and incomparable ball playing will be greatly missed by all true followers of sport.

"MIKE" WAESCO adds two points despite Detroit's football tactics

THE SEASON

Though Loyola's latest season on the basket-ball court was not as successful as previous ones from the view of games won as contrasted to those lost, it was, nevertheless, her outstanding year when considered from other angles. Starting with but two regulars available Coach Sachs built a team around Captain Charles Murphy which established a world's record for consecutive victories in inter-collegiate competition, and, in so doing downed some of the nation's best teams. Champions from every section of the country were met and defeated and even near the end of the year when injuries and ineligibility had completely demoralized the team they completed a rather disastrous eastern trip with decisions over two of the best schools on the Atlantic coast. The cool ball-playing which enabled them to add victory after victory to their remarkable string while skeptics were shaking their heads and saying, "It just can't continue," and the determined spirit which merited eastern victories when even their staunchest advocates were unable to visualize them piling up enough points to win, were the characteristics which place the 1930 squad in a class by itself.

The graduation of co-captains Bremner and Lawless and the injury to the veteran Sextro left three gaps which were not expected to be filled very early in the year. For this reason the decisive victory over Duquesne in the opening game was a pleasant surprise to the student body. The easterners had won the Tri-State championship for three years and they were represented by an experienced, clever team. Their inability to solve Loyola's defense was the main reason for the 29 to 8 score which the home team had amassed with but two minutes to play. The removal of the regulars permitted the Pittsburgh team to slip in five points while the Loyolans were forced to be content with spraying the backboards with fruitless shots.

New Year's Eve Loyola met Montana State in an effort to complete their list of 1929 games without a defeat. The Bobcats who boasted two All-American basketeers seem to have an option on the Rocky Mountain title which they have won for the last four years, and, after seeing them play it is not hard to understand why. Using a fast offense which had beaten Marquette, Purdue, Minnesota, and Nebraska and had failed by but one point to beat Pittsburg, winners of the eastern title; the Bobcats strove to spoil Loyola's record. With Murphy, Flynn and Schuhmann doing the scoring and the impassionate but effective Mike Waesco starring on defense the home team managed to hold a ten-point lead which they had garnered in the opening period. Though other games were won by smaller margins than 58 to 28 this was undoubtedly the year's best home game.

The closest game on the home schedule was played with the University of Detroit on January 16. The visitors were content to make no effort to advance the ball until Loyola would discard its familiar zone defense and then they crashed through to obtain a 10 to 8 lead with two minutes to go. Murphy showed his ability to score when needed and added four points as the final seconds ticked away.

A short jaunt into the east was the next event on the team's schedule, and the first game was played against the University of Dayton. With Murphy saving himself for the impending games with Xavier and Butler the burden of scoring was taken over by Waesco. Mike, who is usually willing to let others score while he passes and stars on defense, discarded his reluctance to shoot and made fourteen points. The Dayton papers in reviewing the game classed the Ramb'ers as the most finished team to ever play in Ohio and were profuse in their praise of Murphy and Waesco.

An exact duplication of the Chicago victor overy Xavier was staged in Cincinnati the next evening. Durburg and Murphy did the best work for Loyola and through their efforts in the final half Loyola won, 18 to 15.

The third game in as many nights was played against Butler on January 24. The Butler team was the 1929 National Champion and their 1930 team with impressive victories over Montana, Purdue, Indiana, Illinois, and Chicago seemed to be out for a duplication of their predecessors' feat—until they met Loyola. The game was played before 10,000 spectators in Indianapolis' massive indoor stadium. There can be no doubt but that for perfection of play by both sides, this game had no equal in 1930, the Bulldogs handling the ball far better than any other Loyola opponents, and the Ramblers using an offense and a defense which was machine-like in its perfection. This was the high point in the season's record because not only did it mark the establishment of a world's record but also it accomplished the impossible: making the Indiana press, which has always maintained that theirs is the heritage of basket-ball supremacy, admit that Loyola produced a better team than any they had.

The much talked about struggle between Loyola and Purdue took place on January 30 at Lafayette. The attraction of this game was the conflict between the two Murphys—Purdue's famous "Stretch" and Loyola's well-known "Feed." For two years there had been discussion as to which of these players was more entitled to All-Western and All-American honors and though Purdue's center was usually given the preference many of the shrewder critics were of the opinion that Loyola's pivot man was more deserving. Because of this the stands were filled and the rafters crowded when the game started. It was evident from the start that the Loyola team, with the exception of Murphy, was considerably off its game and though it obtained the lead for a few minutes the Purdue team by virtue of several long shots obtained a 14 to 9 advantage at the half. A shift of lineup with Durburg replacing the injured Schuhmann enabled Loyola to work the score to 20 to 19 Purdue's favor with half a minute to go. Purdue's two guards were attempting to stall when Murphy intercepted a pass and was fouled as he attempted a basket with fifteen seconds to play. Murphy made a point to send the game into an over-time period but the Big Ten Champs, after making the opening basket, drew Loyola out of their zone defense and scored three more points to bring the final score to 25 to 20. Loyola's Murphy with ten points and a remarkably fine defensive game easily established his superiority over his namesake and in this conceded victory the Ramblers had to be satisfied.

A discouraged team returned to be greeted with the announcement that Flynn, one of the year's most dependable players, was to be ineligible for the rest of the year, and after a week of practice the team left for its eastern trip. The opening contest was dropped to Duquesne after an overtime period of a rough game. The injuries sustained in this contest hampered the team during the week of games along the east coast, but even with this handicap the Ramblers beat North Carolina, the Southern champs and lost to Duke, the runner-ups by three points. A few other games were played but only one victory was obtained. In all these games Murphy was the outstanding player and it was his very fine showing on this tour that influenced the eastern press to give him their unanimous choice of All-American center. This review only touches the high-lights of the season's record and makes no attempt to record the fine team work and skilled play which the members of the 1930 squad evidenced.

Next year's team will be forced to do without Murphy, Sextro and Connelly but with Waesco, Durburg, Smith, Schuhmann, Butzen, Finn, Rafferty and McCracken of this year's varsity and the better players on the freshmen squad to draw from there is every indication that the 1931 team will be another one of which the University can be proud.

The FRESHMAN TEAM

THE SEASON

One of the best moves the Athletic Department made during the past year was the appointment of James Bremner as freshmen coach. Jimmy captained the 1929 team through a season without a defeat and though he is a medical student at the present time he has completed his three years of varsity eligibility. He is an ideal coach because not only is he a wonderful player but also he has an intimate knowledge of the system of play which Coach Sachs uses, thus making it possible to drill the freshmen in the style of play which they will be expected to use when they become eligible for varsity competition.

The call for candidates was answered by about fifty aspirants and after a week of intensive drill only the twenty who showed the most promise remained. For the first two months the only thing they did was provide regular scrimmage for the varsity but as the season neared the end and the varsity were getting more practice than was good for them the freshmen turned toward the completion of the games that had been arranged for them.

The first game and the only one played on the home floor was with the Illinois College of Chiropody and the frosh with Joe Waggoner starring had little trouble beating the embryonic doctors by a 55 to 15 score. Nine players performed for Loyola and all showed considerable ability.

The second contest was with Culver Military Academy at Culver, Indiana. The cadets who were runner-ups for the National Academy title were no match for the green team and with Drugay and Waggoner tied for high scoring honors the team came home with their second victory, this one by the score of 43 to 14.

The McNamara Boosters, Champion Independent team of Indiana, were met in a benefit game in East Chicago and the frosh dropped a close game by a 39 to 38 score. The freshmen's offense worked well but their poor defense in the last quarter when the home team came from behind was responsible for the one point loss. Cavanaugh and Waggoner did the best playing for Loyola until they were removed on fouls.

The final game of the season was played in the opening round of the Central States Amateur Tournament and the freshmen dropped the game to the Goland Athletic Club by a 35 to 31 score. The game was one of the closest in the tournament and it was not until the final moments that the result was evident. The victors were not eliminated until the final round and so the frosh's fine showing gives every hope for some fine varsity material for the next year.

In all probability Waggoner will replace Murphy as varsity center and though he is not as experienced or as clever as Charlie he has the necessary size and endurance to be a regular. Connelly, Potusnik, Sylvestri, Drugay, Cavanaugh, Frish and Acker, the other numeral winners, will also be of great aid next year if their past performances are an indication of their true worth.

President Robert M. Kelley, S.J., presents the Cardinal's cup to "Phil" Krause, Captain of the De La Salle Team

The seventh annual National Catholic Interscholastic Basketball Tournament was held in Alumni Gym from March 19 to 23 and during that short period of time almost sixty thousand spectators crowded the stands to witness the various rounds of the meet. This record-breaking attendance can be accounted for by the high caliber of the teams participating; the absence of any accepted favorite; and the consequent rather general speculation as to the final outcome. Father Thomas Powers S. J., the new Athletic Director; Harold Hillenbrand, the tournament's Executive Secretary; and Robert Morris, Chairman of the Board of Directors, spent weeks reviewing the records of the applicants and their efforts were repaid by the total absence of any team which might be classed as a "set up." Of the thirty-two teams entered from twenty-six states only a few were not state champions and even these boasted sectional titles.

The resignation of Dan Lamont, an experienced tournament director, which was received just a month before the opening game of the classic might seriously have impaired the efficiency of the direction if Father Powers had not been capable of carrying an unfamiliar task to a successful conclusion. Through his efforts the visitors were met at the train station; given the city's finest hotel accommodations; placed in the hand of experienced trainers; and in general had the most minute details of their arrangements taken care of. The departments which came in contact with spectators were equally well organized; a corps of experienced ticket sellers under the direction of Father V. L. Jennemann S. J., was employed; the members of the Blue Key Honorary Fraternity took charge of the direction of the ushers; and the members of the Monogram Club assisted the fans in finding their seats.

In previous years some of the teams displayed rather erratic team work because they were awed by the size of the floor and by the immensity of the crowds. This year, however, all the squads seemed to take the conditions as a matter of course, and awe struck, self-conscious players were noticeable by their absence. Most of the teams which had participated in previous tournaments struggled through the first round though some of them had difficulty in doing so. Jasper Academy, Loyola Academy, and Columbia Academy, who were among the best liked teams, entered the second round by virtue of second half scoring assaults which turned close games into victories. De La Salle, the defending champs; and St. Stanislaus of Bay Saint Louis, Mississippi, runner-ups in the 1929 tournament had less difficulty in advancing.

The second round was jammed with close games which kept large audiences excited all day long. The hostilities for the day were opened with a game between St. Xavier of Louisville and De La Salle. The Kentuckians have been in five of the seven tournaments and in four of them they have placed among the first four. De La Salle was out to show that champions do repeat while Xavier wanted to get their name on the Cardinal's cup for the second time also. This was the closest game of the tournament. There was never more than two points difference between the teams. In the closing minute of play De La Salle made the two points that meant a 12 to 11 victory though some of Xavier's followers will maintain for the rest of their lives that the referees were blind. Decatur High School, northern Indiana champs, won a four point victory from St. Louis; Bishop England High School won from Charleston; South Carolina defeated the Nebraska champs. St. Michaels, the eastern title holders came from a nine point loss in the first half to beat Duquesne of Pittsburgh by ten points; Loyola Academy fell before Columbia of Dubuque by a 12 to 10 score; Jasper beat Father Ryan High of Nashville; Spalding Institute of Peoria won from Champion, Wisconsin's delegates; and Rockhurst High from Kansas City beat St. Stanislaus by an 18 to 17 score. In this last game the Kansas Champions took an 8 point lead before the quarter was over and the Southerners were extended to cut down this advantage. A free-throw in the last two minutes won the game for Rockhurst.

De La Salle opened the quarter finals with a victory over Decatur by the score of 29 to 25. Mylott, Decatur's All-Tournament forward, scored most of his team points and it was through his efforts that Decatur kept in the running. Bishop England's 29 to 26 win over St. Michaels was the surprise of the round. The winners showed a fine offense and they won because the New Jersey team's defense weakened. Jasper Academy advanced at the expense of Columbia while the other game ended with Spalding as victors over Rockhurst.

In the semi-finals De La Salle, defending champs, had little difficulty in beating Bishop England. The easterners were too small to prevent their larger opponents from controlling the ball and De La Salle scored at will. Jasper, Indiana Champions, beat Spalding of Peoria in the other game. Quinlan and O. Aubin were the high scorers while Peters, of Peoria, handled the ball well. The game was close and ended with the score 19 to 16. With a day's rest, the four teams contending for the various places were in good condition again.

In the opening game Spalding won the third place for the second consecutive year, beating Bishop England by a 27 to 17 score. The Carolinians exhibited a superb floor game but their shooting was ragged after the first half. The score at the start of the period was 11 to 10 and though the Bishops continued to excel at floor play they were able to score only three baskets during the second half.

The final game, for which sixty five hundred spectators had crowded the gym, was virtually the same as the game for third place: a contest between giants and faster smaller players and, as in the other game, the good big team beat a good little team. With Aubin, Jasper's midget forward, scoring almost half of his teams points, the Indiana team managed to keep fairly close for the first half but they were unable to stop the Chicago team in the second half. Ed Krause, with twelve points, led the scoring and played a fine enough defense game to merit the award of All Tournament.

The Carinal's cup, indicative of national supremacy, went to De La Salle; the Thompson trophy for the best showing made by an Illinois team was likewise awarded to De La Salle. The Dempsey trophy for the most points in the opening round went to Nashville this year where Father Ryan High School, whose team amassed 55 points in one game, is located. The award for the team coming from behind to win by the largest score went to St. Michaels who scored 22 points more in the second half than did Duquesne. The Grimes award for the best coached team was won by Bishop England and the Nash award for the least number of fouls was won by the same team. The Evening American cup for the most sportsmanlike team was given to Neumann High, of Williamsville, New York. This is a distinct honor and is generally regarded as being second in importance only to the Cardinal's trophy. St. Marys High School, Walensburg, Colorado, was given the Chicago Catholic League placque for the team traveling furthest to compete and the Molloy cup for the most freethrows was given to Rockhurst.

As a climax to the greatest tournament as yet staged the officials announced their All-Tournament team and the Angsten medals were awarded by Father Kelly to: Peters, of Spalding, and Schwartzl, of Xavier, forwards; Quinlan, of Jasper, center; Krause, of De La Salle, and Mylott, Decatur, guards. And so the seventh tournament became history.

A charter was granted to the institution by the Legislature of the State of Illinois, June 30, 1870, with power to confer the usual degrees in the various faculties of a university.

JOSEPH B. TIGERMAN,
Coach

The TRACK TEAM

The year 1930 saw the successful beginning of a Rambler team on the cinder path. In the past, some attempts had been made to organize a cross-country team, and for a few years the efforts bore fruit. But now, with things well under way, Loyola's future position on the track seems assured.

After the Christmas holidays, Coach Tigerman issued a call for candidates. About 15 men answered. These men have made up the nucleus of the team, and have stuck to their regular practice through the winter and spring training. Mr. Tigerman who is a star himself, competes for the Illinois Athletic Club. He is one of the country's best walkers. He has given his time and energy freely, and has developed from a group of inexperienced young men a good team. Mr. Tigerman's patience and encouragement have been responsible for the ultimate success of more than one green and disappointed candidate.

Up to the time of printing this book, five meets had been held. The team got its first test in a quadrangular meet with the University of Chicago, Lake Forest College, and Beloit College, at Bartlett Gym on February 1st. The Ramblers took second with 22 points. Chicago won the meet with 70. Loyola's team gave a fine account of themselves in their first appearance. Bert Francisco, the Loyola star, gathered 11½ points to gain high point honors of the meet. Edward Dowling, lanky senior, was second highest in points for Loyola.

Three weeks later Loyola dropped a dual meet to Sears-Roebuck Y. M. C. A. at the latter's cramped gymnasium. Tom O'Neill won the mile and two mile event being high point man of the meet. Loyola's sprinters could not hold on the abrupt turns of the diminutive track, and hence were unsuccessful. Walsh, Zuley and Vincenti won first places in the high jump, 440 yard dash, and shot put, respectively.

The Rambler flyers met with another reverse in a dual meet with Armour Institute, at Bartlett Gym on March 1st. Armour's distance runners won the meet for their school. Sademan featured with brilliant wins in the two mile and mile runs. Bert Francisco, was again high point man with three victories: the 50 yd. dash, the high hurdles, and the pole vault.

On March 8th, a selected team journeyed to South Bend for the Notre Dame relay, but one Loyola man was injured in a preliminary heat, preventing Loyola from scoring.

A few of the men also went down to the Illinois Relays, but here the nation wide competition was too great, and again Loyola went scoreless.

On April 7th, Coach Tigerman called out his ever striving Rambler to the cinder path. Due to several injuries to our athletes the machine did not function in the proper manner but showed signs of excellent material for the future meets.

Glancing at the remaining schedule it appears that the Campus will be a scene of perpetual motion as the hoofers dash around the track in preparation for the coming meets. They will compete every Saturday from April Nineteenth to the end of school.

The contests that have attracted our attention are the Kansas relays, the Drake relays, two triangular meets at Milwaukee, the National meet at Stagg Field and possibly the Ohio Relay.

The men who have received special commendation for their stellar work and their constant striving for the success of the Maroon and Gold on the cinder path are:

BERT FRANCISCO gives a display of good form over the hurdle

BERT FRANCISCO, who is the all-around man of the team. His specialty is the dashes, and he is co-holder of the world's record at 40 yds. He also runs the high and low hurdles, high jumps, pole vaults and tosses the shot. In the first three meets Bert picked up 31 points. He is a sophomore.

THOMAS O'NEILL, also a sophomore is the distance star of the team. Tom is superb in the half mile, mile and two mile. He is also a valuable relay man.

WALLACE KIRBY, is another sterling distance man, and a fine teammate for O'Neill. Kirby is a freshman at the Dental School.

JACK STROBEL'S work in the relay in the Chicago meet was the finest seen on the Rambler squad. Jack is a junior.

ANTON VINCENTI takes care of the school's interests in the weight events. Anton is always good for a first or second in the discus and shot. He is a senior, and the team will miss him next year.

BERT ZULEY, is a crack quarter miler and regular on the relay team. Zuley is a classmate of Kirby's in the Dental Department.

THOMAS WALSH is always striving for the highest and usually finds it somewhere above six feet in the high jump. Tom is a freshman and will be a valuable Rambler of the future on both the track and gridiron.

EDWARD DOWLING, alias "Duke," runs the high and low hurdles in no mean time and clears the high jump bar in the neighborhood of five feet six. Ed is a senior.

GERALD JOHNSON, another freshman flash, keeps the varsity distance stars on the jump. He specializes in the half mile and mile.

JOHN HORNE is the most reliable middle distance man on the squad. In addition he is Loyola's best bet in the broad jump. John leaves via graduation.

LOYOLA shows up well at the Quadrangular meet at BARTLETT GYM

THOMAS HOWLAND is a valuable sprinter and is especially reliable in the 220. Tom is a sophomore.

JAY MANN is the outstanding freshman quarter miler and sprinter. Jay will win many victories for Loyola in the next three years.

ED MARCIN, is the best sprinter in the freshman group. He does everything from 50 to 440, and equally well in all. He will be a valuable Rambler in coming years.

JOE KEARNEY, former captain of the cross country team, is also helping the track team in the two mile run. His steeple-chasing has helped him in many races. Joe will graduate.

JEROME NIBBE, is the Ramblers' best bet in the pole vault. He also runs the hurdles, and competes in the high jump. Jerome is a freshman, and more will be heard from him.

The remaining members of the squad are working hard for places with the regulars. They are Bodin, Silvestri, Connelly, Kaminski, Huckin, Ployhart and Stadler. Excepting Connelly, all of these men will be back next year.

The TENNIS TEAM

The Loyola University tennis team started the season handicapped by the loss of four of its outstanding players of last year's team. Paul Lietz, 1929 captain and first ranking player, and Harold Prendergast were lost through graduation, while Paul O'Connor and Paul Diggles did not return to Loyola in September. Nevertheless, tennis hopes are rather bright because of the exceptional good material produced from the freshmen squad, also, several upper classmen distinguished themselves on the clay court in the Loyola News Tournament. As a result a very well balanced team is assured, although it may not have the individual talent that last year's squad boasted. Mr. Hodapp, who has taken upon himself the position as coach, is confident of a representative team.

Among the regulars from last year's team who reported at the first practice were Frank Melody and Bill Reidy. Frank was extremely busy last year on the publications and could not show his hidden qualities but this year his fast over-hand stroke will be fatal to many of the opponents. Reidy was a fairly consistent winner this year, and with last year's seasoning behind him, should develop into a great star.

George Zwikstra, winner of the Loyola News Tourney, although only a sophomore, is expected to be one of the leading candidates for a position on the squad. Last season, as a freshman, he was able to give Paul Lietz an interesting afternoon's work on the single court. As a member of the varsity, he should surpass his former excellence.

The freshmen also boasted of a strong team this year. Several of its members were more than a match for some of the varsity men. Especially was this true of Bob O'Connor and Jack McGuire, both former Loyola Academy stars. They will add a great deal of strength to the squad next year.

Among the new faces on the squad are those of Joe Kuenhle, Jack Lannon, Joe Frisch and Sid Hirschfield. All these men are upper classmen who were unable to play on last year's squad. Kuenhle was the captain and first ranking player at Lake View high school three years ago. Hirschfield hails from Crane, while Joe Frisch was a star at Loyola Academy two years back. Jack Lannon and Charlie Mann were not on their high school teams, but have developed a good game since their entry into college. Jack Laemmar and Norm Doherty are also very skilled with the racket.

Mr. Hodapp has played an important part in the development of last year's squad and his effort will not have gone to naught. The team appreciates his help, as shown by their constant cooperation. As manager, Bob Murphy arranged the schedule, passed out tennis balls, and performed those other various duties which are demanded of him. He occasionally batted a ball around himself.

When the Loyolan went to press, the tennis team was just getting in shape for its first match, so it will not be possible to state the outcome of any of the matches.

The following schedule was arranged for the 1930 season.

The GOLF TEAM

Six years ago golf was officially introduced as a varsity sport at Loyola in a very unprompted manner. Roger Kiley, who was then coach of the baseball team, called for four volunteers to play. Luckily there were four on the baseball team who, incidentally, could play golf, for otherwise it is improbable that the sport should have reached the pinnacle of importance it now occupies at the University.

Once the start was made the worst difficulty was passed, and if the team continues to surmont the obstacles as before, the sport is bound to progress in days to come.

In 1927 the team was entered in the Central Intercollegiate championship at Milwaukee, sponsored by Marquette University, and could do no better than second place. The championship was won by Armour Tech, the strongest and most successful foe that the team has had for four years, and the individual championship was taken by Len Fons of Marquette. In 1928 Loyola won the Central Intercollegiate championship and Joshua D'Esposito won the Individual Trophy. The golfers were unable to repeat last year as Marquette had no team and consequently the tournament which had been under their auspices was not held.

However, four matches were played. The team got off to a poor start at Detroit on a day more fit for a freezing hockey game than anything else, and suffered its first defeat. Returning to Chicago the team met its second defeat by a half point margin at the hands of Armour Tech, a match the winning of which depended on the last putt on the last green. St. Johns of Toledo was played next and a gratifying victory resulted over this powerful team. To complete the season, revenge was taken from Armour by a top-heavy score. This was the first victory over Armour in six matches and promises well for the coming years.

This year's team promises to be the strongest representation Loyola has ever had in the sport. Two of the men are completing their fourth year, one is on his third season and another on his second, and so, besides ability, the team possesses experience. In addition several men will be in line who can give any of the veterans a run for their money. The team is composed of Shanahan and D'Esposito, who are the four year men and Corrigan, Ludwig, Maulella and Dick Raysa all of whom have represented Loyola in the past. Freddie Sextro, Julian D'Esposito, and Jim Vonesh have shown the requisite ability to play with the varsity.

The schedule calls for matches with Detroit, St. John's of Toledo, Armour Tech, and Notre Dame. Matches are also pending with several others, notable among which is Drake University, a team of the finest golfers and sportsmen any Loyola team has ever met. It is hard to forecast the results of the matches at the present time, but we can only say that a defeat this year is not something that is bargained for and by all appearances it will be unexpected.

INTRAMURAL TRACK MEET

During the winter months, Coach Joseph B. Tigerman organized and conducted the second annual intramural track meet. The purpose of this, was to find capable men to represent the maroon and gold in the varsity meets and to develop them during the pre-season weather.

On Friday afternoon, January 17th, thirty green and inexperienced runners appeared in the gymnasium to represent their classes and to show some of their hidden talent. By the appearance of their uniforms, little was expected by the onlookers, but soon the spectators were astonished by the fleetness of their classmen.

The Sophomore Arts were the victors in the meet with a total of 36 points. They were closely followed by the freshmen with 26 points. The seniors and juniors Gathered 9 and 5 points respectively.

As Bert Francisco lowered his own record for the 40 yd. dash, Mr. Tigerman was astonished at the exceptional material he would have for the coming events. He realized that a successful track team could be organized. While Bert also won the shot put and 40 yard high hurdles, his classmate, Tom O'Neil copped the mile and the $\frac{1}{2}$ mile race. These two men alone collected sufficient points to win the meet for the sophomore class. The freshmen showed signs of developing into runners as they followed behind their lawful superiors to gain second place.

Dan Lamont, the Director of Athletics, acting in the capacity as the official starter, commended the athletes on their prospects. He wished them success as he awarded the winners of the events with gold medals.

INTRAMURAL BASKET-BALL

To further the interest of activities at Loyola, the Loyola News, thru its representative, Leo Sheehan, sponsored the third intramural basketball tournament to a successful completion.

The anxiety created by the last tournament caused sixteen teams from all departments of the university to participate. The Lake Shore Campus had the majority of entries as the teams from the other schools had difficulty in keeping their meetings on the evenings assigned.

Many close games were held in the gymnasium as the teams strove to eliminate their opponents. In the semi-finals, the Alpha Deltas conquered the defending champs from the Medical School to enter the finals. After an overtime period between the Iggies and the Juniors, Cuny, star center of the Juniors sank the decisive basket to defeat the Iggies.

On March 14, McNeil led his fraternity brothers against the towering Juniors composed of Kearns, Quinn, Strobel, Dooley, Cuny, Weimer and Norton but the Juniors proved too much for the Alpha Deltas and defeated them 19 to 17 to win the Intra-mural Basket-ball Championship of 1930.

The value of such a tournament cannot be over-estimated because of the personal benefits it gives to each participant. Many students are confronted with handicaps which hinder them from entering varsity competition but by means of an intra-mural tournament the less efficient player may receive all the benefits of the Varsity athletics.

THE BOWLING LEAGUE

After a lapse of a few years, the desire to continue the sport of bowling was resumed in a concrete way during the past season. Practically every student who was not taking an active part in the major sports found ever increasing enjoyment and recreation at the bowling alley.

This sport became so intensified by the increasing popularity that a well organized league of eight teams was formed by Fred Ludwig, a Sophomore of the Arts Campus. Entries came from every campus of the University, but due to times of meeting, the teams were selected only from the Arts and Law Schools.

The Cannons, an aggregation composed of Joe Ohlheiser, Joe Frisch and Don Kavanaugh were the outstanding bowlers in the league. Their regular strikes and spares caused them to be consistent winners, and only on exceptional occasions could the opponents afford real competition. They were credited with nineteen victories and two defeats.

The other rankings were a struggle from the very beginning. After the teams had completed their schedule, four teams ended in a quadrangular tie for second place.

After a poor start, the Shysters, a team from the Law School, came back strongly to enter the tie of fourteen wins and seven losses. Their team composed of P. Fazio, Matt Lear, and Neal McAuliffe were veterans of the past tournament.

Ed Keevens, the anchor man of his chosen team, kept up the standard of his team by his exceptional high bowling. He holds high individual honors for the league.

Jack Laemmar and Bob O'Connor Fight it Out.

LOYOLA NEWS INTRAMURAL TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Soon after the opening of school, the Loyola News showed the newly acquainted freshmen just how a real tennis tournament should be conducted. The work was directed by Robert Murphy who is credited with the success of the fourth annual tournament. Through his efforts, forty men were brought together to compete for final honors.

The tournament has many great features which distinguish it as a major event at Loyola. On account of the few requirements to enter, any individual may participate. He need not be a master of the art to receive the full benefits of the game.

The ceded players of the meet were Zwikstra, Reidy, and Melody. Melody failed to show his skill because of his defeat in the first round by Wallen, the dark horse of the tournament. Reidy was strong until he met Bob O'Connor who proved to be his conquerer. With little trouble, Zwikstra entered the final round by defeating Calkins, Miller, and Mann in respective order.

After several weeks of extensive playing and upsets, the veteran George Zwikstra met his Bob O'Connor in the final round. George's experience from previous years proved too much for his freshman rival. His back-court game was a decisive factor in controlling his placement shots and slow lobs. George was presented with an expensive racquet while O'Connor received a fine sweater presented by the sponsors of the tournament.

The men who have fostered such activities should be commended on their persistent efforts to create an interest in sports throughout the student body. They have striven to give to the college man every opportunity to develop into an athlete and to adapt himself better to his favorite sport and should be congratulated by the coaches, whom they assisted by helping select men for the varsity squad.

“St. Ignatius College lost a baseball game in the ninth inning to the University of Chicago on May 5th. It was the first defeat of the year for St. Ignatius. We were leading 5 to 4, until Capt. Harper of Chicago, knocked a home run with one man on in the last of the ninth.”

Phi Mu Chi Fraternity was founded at the University of Chicago on November 22, 1921, and exactly a year later at Loyola University. It is the oldest social fraternity at Loyola. The first meetings were held in the biology laboratory where the ideals of the small group of founders were formulated and the constitution drawn up.

The next year a chapter house was secured and has since been the nucleus around which the activities of the fraternity revolve. The succeeding years have shown progress in material, social, and scholastic advancement. The six original founders have passed on, imbuing their successors with the ideals which inspired them.

In 1926 the Grand Chapter disbanded in favor of the Board of Trustees which directs the active chapter in all its financial and administrative policies.

Phi Mu Chi Fraternity has always encouraged extra-curricular activities at Loyola. It has given its best talent to school publications, class positions, and societies of all kinds. Scholarships, too, have not been a minor consideration of the fraternity and Phi Mu Chi considers it a distinct compliment to regard as honorary members Howard E. Egan, Ph.D.; George A. Schmeing, M.A., M.S.; Bertram J. Steggert, A.M.; and Aloysius Hodapp, M.A.

The social life of the fraternity has been one of fondest memories. Sleigh rides, smokers, house parties, and dances have been the call of the day. The annual spring dance has become tradition and the fraternity has done credit to it this year with the brilliant supper dance held on May 23 in the Oriental Room of the Knickerbocker Hotel.

The Iota Mu Sigma fraternity was organized at the Loyola University School of Medicine in the year 1922. The founders were Drs. Partipillo, Governale, A Geraci, S. Geraci, Drago, Champagne, and Conforti. The constitution was drawn up in the same year.

The purpose of the organization was to organize the students of Italian parentage at the Medical School for social and scholastic benefits.

The year 1923 saw the membership increased to thirteen. Doctors Volini and Suldanc were elected honorary members and the prestige of the fraternity increased accordingly. The fraternity has a key as its insignia of membership during these years. Scientific questions were read and discussed at the meetings and the ideal of scholastic advancement was furthered. The by-laws of the fraternity were amended in this year to provide that the members of Iota Mu Sigma should not belong to any other medical fraternity of a social nature.

By 1925 the membership had been increased to twenty-one. The fraternity began, in this year, to select its members in accordance with their scholastic standing. Pledge pins were used for the first time. The year, a successful one, was climaxed by a big dance at the Hotel La Salle.

The pin now in use was selected as the fraternity emblem in 1926. This year also saw the recognition of Iota Mu Sigma by the other medical fraternities and Doctors Drago, Pace, and Vianisi were admitted to Pi Kappa Epsilon Honorary Fraternity.

Iota Mu Sigma has held the distinction of placing more members on the Medical Seminary than any other medical fraternity.

Alpha Delta Gamma was founded on the Lake Shore Campus of Loyola University in the year 1924. Three years later the work of expansion began and Beta Chapter was founded and installed at St. Louis University, St. Louis, Missouri. Gamma Chapter, at DePaul University, Chicago, was added the following year, closing, temporarily, new installations in other colleges and universities throughout the Middle West.

Alpha Delt has gained quite a reputation for holding large and socially successful dances. They ordinarily give two each year, one in the fall and the other shortly after Easter. While there is no set rule the dances are ordinarily informal and attract large numbers of non-fraternity men and other fraternity men from all branches of the University. Since it is primarily a social fraternity it fulfills its purpose admirably.

Members of the Alpha Delta Gamma Fraternity have always taken an active part in the activities of Loyola, many have been elected to high offices in the classes, and there have always been some who are deeply engaged in various phases of varsity athletics.

The Fraternity confines itself to the Lake Shore Campus.

February 28, 1930, marked the fifth anniversary of the founding of the fraternity of Pi Alpha Lambda whose development has kept a steady pace with the progress of Loyola University.

The Charter members in 1925 started the fraternity on its road to success, and during the intervening five years, the members have followed in the footsteps of the illustrious founders and have made an enviable history for Pi Alpha Lambda.

Besides a dinner and meeting on Monday nights, the strong fraternal spirit has been further welded among the members by monthly House parties, and by the three closed formal dances given during the school year. The Founders Day Formal caps the climax of social events and binds the alumni and active members in the fraternal ties.

In the extra-curricular activities of the Lake Shore Campus Pi Alpha Lambda has made an enviable record. Student government was promoted by a Pi Alpha alumnus who became the first president of the Student Council. It was through the efforts of members of this fraternity that the honorary fraternities of Blue Key and Beta Pi were brought to Loyola University. The publications, the debating club and the other activities of the University have always had as their high lights the members of Pi Alpha Lambda.

A fitting epitaph of the fraternity was expressed by a past president: "Pi Alpha Lambda is an organization which from its very birth has been the stormy petrel of Loyola extra-curricular life, hated by many, admired by more, respected by all, ignored by none."

In February, 1927, the Sigma Lambda Beta Fraternity was organized at Loyola University by the pioneer students of the newly founded Night Commerce Department. It had as its purpose the encouragement of social activities and the promotion of commercial theories and ideas and high moral standards as exemplified at Loyola University. Membership has been granted only to those who are proficient in studies, interested in the school and its students, and active in athletic and social functions.

During its short existence Sigma Lambda Beta has always firmly adhered to these principles, and as a result, has more than accomplished its purpose. The annual drive for new students has brought an increased enrollment to the University. An attendance of over two hundred and fifty enthusiastic and appreciative students at the regular smokers, boxing and vaudeville entertainments is a good indication as to their success. The banquets, parties, dances, the Thanksgiving Jamboree, the New Year's Eve formal, the Easter informal, etc., have always proven delightful and pleasing.

The Sigma Lambda Beta Fraternity has both an active and an alumni group. Regular meetings are held semi-monthly at Suite 118, Atlantic Hotel.

Pi Mu Phi Fraternity was established during the present scholastic year. The organization was founded on January 10, 1930, with the full approbation of the faculty of the Loyola University School of Medicine. Even at this early date its roster is graced with the names of many prominent faculty members.

Pi Mu Phi was organized to promote friendship and social contact among the medical students of Polish extraction. In the pursuance of this purpose of creating a spirit of organization and mutual co-operation between one another and also between the students and faculty it has been successful. It has as its motivating interest the imparting and obtaining of medical knowledge, the mitigating of difficulties attendant upon its members, and, in general, the aid of fellow students to one another for the attainment of the student's goal—success in the medical profession.

The foundation of Pi Mu Phi is due to the zealous and untiring efforts of the members. Credit is due especially to Messrs. Libnock, Konopa, Piszczek, Stybel, Hajduk, Sarnecki, and Kozdroj. These men are to be congratulated upon their noble efforts and congratulated upon the success of their great undertaking—the organization of Pi Mu Phi.

The Phi Chi Medical Fraternity, Incorporated, was founded in the year of 1889 at the University of Vermont, which has since been designated as the Alpha chapter of the Fraternity. From this humble beginning, the Fraternity has grown during the last forty-one years to be one of the largest and most respected of Medical societies. It stands to reason that it did not "just grow" to its enviable position in the Fraternity World. While it may be true that it made its reputation on the character of its membership and adherence to the basic principles enunciated by its Founders, something like a system and the exploitation of that system has a great deal to do with it. And briefly, the system has been basically in the selection of men of character, principle, endeavor and love of the Medical Arts. From such a soil and with the cultivation of such membership, the society of Phi Chi has grown to be as it is today!

The Loyola Chapter of Phi Chi, known as Phi Sigma, was founded in the year of 1907, the present University Department then being the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at the same location. Phi Chi is proud to say that some six hundred graduates passed through its portals, and are today most ably representing the high ideals and principles of the fraternity. With the acquiring of the College of Physicians and Surgeons by Loyola University in 1919, the fraternity has locally made great strides, until today, it is symbolic of the scholarship and high ideals of the University. It is firmly represented in our faculty, and it promises to remain and be the stellate leader of society activities in the Medical Department of Loyola University. Its present Chapter House is located at 3345 Washington Boulevard.

Phi Beta Pi was organized as a local Medical Fraternity at the University of Pittsburgh in 1891. Since then it has spread to many of the leading colleges and universities throughout the United States. It now has over thirty-five chapters.

In 1921 the Alpha Omega Chapter was formed at the Loyola University School of Medicine. It was made up of men who had grouped themselves together in an effort to better their social conditions and to foster an interest in the medical professions. In the short time that the fraternity has been established here, a good representation has been made in the faculty, some, however, having originally been members of chapters in other departments. At the present time there are almost as many faculty members as student members.

The fraternity occupies the house at 3729 Lake Park Avenue.

The Gamma Chapter of the Phi Lambda Kappa Fraternity was established at Loyola University in 1921 from a group of students in the School of Medicine.

Since its establishment the fraternity has held its membership down to a limited number more for the purpose of keeping a high social standing rather than considering the advantages of many members of mediocre talents.

The group was formed originally from a small number of men who desired to earn a degree in Medicine, not for the purpose of establishing a reputation for social proficiency around the campus by promoting large dances and taking an active part in the affairs of the school but rather of bringing together those men who otherwise might find difficulty in establishing lasting friendships. The fraternity has successfully retained and fulfilled this purpose up to the present and by so doing has made itself conspicuous by its contrast with other fraternities on the Medical School Campus.

Delta Theta Phi Law Fraternity was founded at the Cleveland Law School of Baldwin Wallace College, Cleveland, Ohio, in 1900. Three fraternities: Delta Phi Delta, Alpha Kappa Phi, and Theta Lambda Phi, amalgamated to form this fraternity and used as a name a part of each of the three original names.

Delta Theta Phi, one of the oldest and largest law fraternities in the country has sixty-five active and ten alumni senates. The senates which are named after leading jurists are honored by the names of many of the outstanding judges in the United States Courts.

McKenna Senate, named after the United States Supreme Court Justice, William McKenna, was established at Loyola University School of Law in December, 1925. It originated from the Thirteen Club, a small social group of thirteen members, and has now grown to include over a hundred active and alumni brothers.

The object of Delta Theta Phi is to unite fraternally students of law, to surround them with an environment whereby the traditions of the profession may descend upon them, to lead them and their fellow students to higher scholarship and legal learning, to promote justice, and to inspire respect for the noblest qualities of manhood.

Nu Sigma Phi Fraternity was organized in 1896, at what was then called the College of Physicians and Surgeons—now the University of Illinois College of Medicine. The organizers—a group of far-seeing, ambitious women—recognized the need for a union of women with so many common ideals and professional and social interests, as medical women have.

From a humble start of about 12 members, with Dr. Irene Robinson Pratt as the first Noble Grand, the Fraternity has flourished until at the present time, there are over twenty chapters in universities scattered throughout the United States, with hundreds of active members, and many more members of the Grand Chapter.

Grand Chapter, organized in 1913, served more closely to unify and preserve the bonds of friendship between the members actively engaged in the practice of their profession. It was in that year that Drs. Julia Holmes Smith, Sophia Brumback, Jennie Clark, and Lois Lindsay Wynekoop were made permanent trustees of the Fraternity.

Epsilon Chapter, at Loyola, was reorganized in October, 1916, from a previously disbanded Chapter at the Bennett Medical School. Among the women instrumental in reviving Epsilon were, Drs. Grace Mitchell Eide, Charlotte B. Nelson, and Bertha Eide, all of whom are in active practice in Chicago.

Among the alumnae members of whom Epsilon Chapter may be especially proud are, Dr. Grace Mitchell, Dr. Bertha Eide, Dr. Noreen Sullivan, and a more recent member—Dr. Gertrude Engbring, who is doing excellent work as a resident at Cook County Hospital.

With a present active membership of twelve in Epsilon, and many more in Alpha, Beta, and Pi, other Chicago Chapters, much constructive work has been done along scientific and social lines.

The Lambda Rho Honorary Radiological Fraternity was organized in the school year of 1924-5 by members of the Junior Class of the Loyola University School of Medicine.

The Fraternity was organized to provide means whereby the therapeutic and diagnostic application of physical phenomena may be presented to the students of Loyola University School of Medicine by men who are authorities in these branches of Medicine and to permit greater amplification of these subjects than was possible in the regular schedule.

The proposal was taken up with Dr. B. H. Ordoff, Professor and Head of the Department of Radiology, and Dr. Henry Schmitz, Professor and Head of the Department of Gynecology, who agreed to sponsor the Fraternity and aid in its management. With this support the subject was taken up with the Dean and Regent who heartily endorsed the proposed Fraternity.

The first meeting was held at the Chicago City Club where the first steps to organization were taken. Subsequent meetings were held at the downtown school.

The Tivnen Ophthalmological Society was founded at The Loyola University School of Medicine in the year 1922 for the purpose of bringing to the students of the Medical School extra-curricular discussions of matters pertaining to the study of the functions and diseases of the eye.

Meetings are held monthly, at which papers on assigned subjects are prepared and read by students. Following the reading, discussion is led by appointed members, others joining in at will. Doctors Tivnen and Ensminger usually add some very valuable remarks which throw added light upon discussions.

The Society is greatly indebted to Doctors Tivnen and Ensminger for their kindly interest and encouragement.

Admittance to membership is based on scholastic standing and personality. The Society has been exceedingly careful and unprejudiced in making selections from the student body at all times since its establishment and it is generally regarded among the student body that only those who are the most deserving have been honored with membership. New members are admitted regularly in order to keep up the work started and to keep the fraternity and its endeavors a permanent part of the University.

Blue Key is a national honor fraternity with a two-fold purpose, first, the honoring of men who have proved themselves outstanding in service to their college, and second, the support and encouragement of activities which tend to further the interest of the university.

The fraternity was founded at the University of Florida in October, 1924, and since then has spread over the entire country. In 1926 the Loyola chapter was admitted as the nineteenth; today there are over fifty chapters, with some of the largest universities in the country on the list. The chapters are kept in close touch with each other from the national headquarters and general extension division at Gainesville, Florida, the engaging letters of Colonel B. R. Riley, national president and founder, serving as an excellent medium for constant exchange of ideas among active groups the country over.

Some of the outstanding accomplishments of the Loyola chapter have been the founding and development of Hello Week and Freshman Welcome Day on the North Campus, which was later turned over to the Student Council, the promotion of the first all-university Homecoming Dance, which was then given to the Monogram Club to handle in succeeding years, and the development of the Loyola Union after several other bodies had failed at an all-university organization. Ever since its establishment, the Loyola chapter has been in charge of the seating and reception work of the National Catholic Basketball Tournament.

The national constitution provides "The test shall be that the men chosen shall be recognized as all-around men in scholarship, college activities, high moral standing and personality."

Beta Pi Fraternity was organized at Loyola University in 1926 for the purpose of honoring those men who have advanced to major positions on the staffs of Loyola Publications and to provide a more concrete aim for those underclassmen who are entering upon publication work in the school.

Membership is limited to those who have excelled in the editorial or literary aspects of the publications rather than those who have dealt with the mechanical work. Inasmuch as it is necessary for a man to be recommended twice, that is, at the end of two different years, before he may receive a key, only those who have reached the end of their sophomore year may become members. An exception to this rule is made in the rare instance when a man is made editor of a publication at the beginning of his second year of work on it and also when a senior has held a major position satisfactorily and yet has not worked on the publication during his three previous years at the University.

Being purely an honorary fraternity Beta Pi has not attempted any particular constructive program other than serving as a reward for high literary achievement. It is hoped that in the future some sort of scholarship of a literary nature may be established.

Beta Chapter of Illinois, Loyola University, Chicago, was elected to membership in Alpha Kappa Delta, National Honor Society in Sociology, February 7, 1928. The Chapter was organized under the inspiration and leadership of Rev. Frederic Siedenburgh, S. J., founder and Dean of the School of Sociology. Mr. Kimball Young, National Secretary of Alpha Kappa Delta installed Loyola Chapter and initiated the fourteen charter members.

The primary purpose of Alpha Kappa Delta is conceded to be that of stimulating interest in the development of the science of Sociology and its application to society and its problems. Unbiased social research is the keystone of this honor society, whose members aim to become investigators of social phenomena and to interpret their findings in significant relationships pertaining to the development of society.

Lecturers of note in the field of Sociology and Social Welfare have appeared on the programs of Loyola Chapter and have stimulated interest through the round-table discussions. Members of the Chapter, since its organization, have contributed worthwhile studies in special phases of social research and many thought-provoking book reviews have been presented by the members.

History and Purpose: The Interfraternity Council of the Lake Shore Campus was established at the beginning of the scholastic year of 1928. The purpose of the organization was to bring about a unified spirit among the social fraternities of the campus so that the fraternities might work together for the betterment of the University. Among the activities which were aided by the council were the athletic rallies and the class dances. In addition to the aid given to various organizations the council settled all disputes among the fraternities and determined the policy of pledging and rushing.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Deepest gratitude for their efforts in preparing this book are expressed to the following:

The Root Studio, Photographers
The Standard Photo Engraving Co.
D. F. Keller and Co., Printers
William Charles Griffith, Artist

There are many individuals who stand out prominently among the others for the favors they have performed but to mention one would be unjust unless all were given equal credit.

Naturally, we cannot include the names of all the deserving ones on one small page. THE LOYOLAN could not be issued without the general support of the entire student body, it could not be issued without the individual labors of many who do not hold prominent staff positions, in fact—well, let's all have a drink on the house.

The Printer who is himself an artist

THE finest art—the best plates—the most interesting layout are of little value in a yearbook unless the printer is himself an artist. He must have an enthusiastic desire never to be satisfied until the yearbook carries the complete visualization of the editor's idea. That Keller succeeds is evidenced by the many trophies which Keller produced year-books have won.

Select the Time—this is the Place!

The St. Clair, one of Chicago's newest hotels offers ideal facilities for those important college affairs.

Convenient for meetings of faculty or student groups. Lunch in the beautiful Spanish dining room—or private rooms, if you prefer. Food and service unexcelled. The ball-room you've been dreaming about to make the fraternity dance a distinctive event. The very place for the contemplated banquet. All priced to suit the college purse.

Delightful rooms and complete, courteous hotel service at reasonable rates for the out-of-town visitor. Convenient to the shopping and theatre district of the Loop.

LAW BOOKS

Everything In Law Books

for

Lawyers and Students

New and Second-hand

We specialize in students' text and case books. We buy and sell for cash, and trade for books in use. DISPOSE of your books while they have value. Students' books are of no value in PRACTICE. We have a large stock of second-hand books on hand at all times.

Any book you may need in practice can be secured from us at lowest prices, including state reports, statutes, Ruling Case Law, Cyc and Corpus Juris, and American and English Encyclopedia of Law, Encyclopedia of Pleading and Practice, Encyclopedia of Forms, etc., etc.

Latest catalog of law books can be had on request.

It pays to buy second-hand books, as new books are second-hand the moment you secure them and depreciate in value to the extent of 50% or more.

Mercy Federation

What is the Mercy Federation?

The Mercy Federation is a Federation of the Alumnae of the following schools:

SAINT XAVIER COLLEGE
SAINT XAVIER ACADEMY
MERCY HOSPITAL TRAINING
SCHOOL FOR NURSES
MERCY HIGH SCHOOL
SAINT PATRICK (South Chicago)
SAINT ELIZABETH
SAINT GABRIEL
SAINT JAMES
SAINT ITA

Why the Mercy Federation?

To keep all Mercy Graduates closely associated with their Alma Mater.

What do we owe Our Alma Mater?

A great measure of our happiness and success today is due to training we received at school.

How can we repay our Debt to Alma Mater?

By paying our yearly dues of $1.00 promptly and supporting our Sisters, THE SISTERS OF MERCY, in all their undertakings.

ATHLETIC SHOES

Riddell Football shoes were first used in 1922. Northwestern University has used them continuously since 1925, University of Chicago, since 1924, Illinois and Nebraska and many others since 1925. This continuous use speaks for itself. Riddell cleats have won for themselves the unique distinction of being the original and only screw cleat that will stand up under hard usage.
